Hughes' F-11 Plane Stands On Its Merits, Pepper Says

Elliott Roosevelt's Night-Clubbing Bad But Plane May Be Okay, He Declares

By The Associated Press

Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) yesterday tabbed as possibly "bad judgment" the 1943 night clubbing which Elliott Roosevelt will be asked to explai ntoday to Senators investigating Howard Hughes' wartime plane contracts.

But Pepper told a reporter he did not think any evidence yet produced before the Senate War Investigating Subcommittee disputes his contention that Hughes' F-11 photo-reconnaissance plane "stands on its own merits."

The committee has heard testimony that a 1943 recommendation of Roosevelt, drafted in the period when he was the guest of publicity man John Meyer in a costly round of New York night spots, caused Army Air Forces' Gen. H. H. Arnold to reverse a previous decision and order 100 of Hughes' planes.

Report Upheld

Pepper said while the son of the late President may have used "bad judgment" in accepting entertainment from Hughes' man Meyer, he thought Roosevelt's report on the F-11 "justifies the Army's acceptance of that ship."

Elliott was an air force photo-reconnaissance officer in Europe during the war. He rose to brigadier general.

"There is a question of individual morals and conduct involved in Roosevelt's acceptance of this entertainment," the Florida Senator said. "The committee has a perfect right to ask him whether it influenced his judgment on the plane.

"But I still haven't seen anything that indicates the plane itself won't stand on its own merits or that there was any fraud, corruption or excessive profits in the contract with the Government."

Meyer Back to Stand

Meyer, whose records show he helped the transcontinental romance which united Roosevelt and movie actress Faye Emerson in marriage, also is due to go back on the stand today to tell more about his expense accounts.

His records list a total of $5083.79 as paid out of Hughes' money in entertainment of Elliott and his companions.

Chairman Ferguson (R., Mich.) of the subcommittee conducting the investigation said he would continue to ask Meyer how his actions in picking up the check for night club champagne and buying nylon hosiery, lipsticks, pocketbooks and other expensive presents for girls helped along wartime plane production.

The Michigan Senator made a point of that last week when he introduced a statement that Meyer had listed expenses of $169,000 in the period from April 1942 to January 1, 1947. Ferguson said the Hughes Tool Co., the Hollywood plane builder's parent organiza-

Ramadier Tells France to Expect Years of Controls

Paris, Aug. 3.—Premier Paul Ramadier told Frenchmen today they would have to be disciplined for another generation if they wished to survive as a democracy.

The Socialist Premier suggested that Britain might be a model for France.

Ramadier restated his belief that postwar France must follow a middle course between "dirigisme" (state control) and freedom of commerce. He said needs in war-devastated areas were still so great that there could be no thought of releasing controls.

Government agricultural authorities expressed grave anxiety today about the potato crop.

Excessive hot weather and low summer rainfall has cracked farm soil throughout France.

Zoo's Emperor Penguin Dies, Grieving for Late Sweetheart

District's Rare Bird Hadn't Been the Same Since Death in April

The world's sole emperor penguin in captivity has succumbed to a broken heart at the Washington Zoo.

News of his lamented death was given out yesterday by Assistant Headkeeper Malcolm Davis. And with it came a story of a great ornithological courtship.

The romance was kindled, despite the temperature, in the refrigerated penguin quarters at the bird house. Davis, only man known to have observed such a courtship, said love walked in when the emperor strode in dignity over to the female of his choice and nodded with approval.

Later, Davis related, the emperor showed his affection by walking around his lady clockwise—and then counter-clockwise. Then the ardent male, forgetting his dignity, would zip up to his sweetheart and embrace her with his flippers. Later he would pat her on the back with great zest.

But that was long ago.

The lady, let us call her Mrs. X, for propriety's sake, died last April at penguin headquarters. And things, since then, were not the same.

Our lover lost his appetite and had to be "forced" fed. Keepers had to hold his mouth open, he was so reluctant, and flip fish way down his throat.

And that's how things were—nothing to live for.

Mr. X even turned his back on the public which once had received his full attention and affection.

The Emperor Is Dead . . .

"He would get in a corner and sit with his back to the people," a keeper related sadly. "He just didn't enjoy facing the world anymore."

And the emperor would not associate with those lesser in stature than he—the rockhopper, macaroni, humboit and jackass penguins.

So it may be said he was a very lonely fellow, too.

Last Thursday—at 11 p. m.—the visitor from the Antarctic, who arrived here with Byrd expeditions in 1941, fell over on his side and died. That's all.

GOP Opposes Democrat Plan For Congress

Wherry to Block 'Lots' of Changes In Reorganization

By The Associated Press

A Democratic demand arose yesterday in the Senate for "lots" of changes in the reorganization law which has had a seven months trial in making Congress more efficient.

But Republican leaders said they expect to carry through the 1948 session with the law as passed last year. They said they like it enough after a seven months trial not to change it yet.

Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.), the party's whip, and Senator Taft (R., Ohio), chairman of its Senate Policy Committee, contend that more actual operating experience is needed under the new plan before revisions are undertaken.

The law whacked off a number of committees, called for fixing a Federal spending ceiling (which never was agreed on), set a suggested adjournment date (which stood), provided special assistants, ordered new committee practices raised Congressmen's salaries and made other changes—aimed at making Congress more business-like.

Adopted under a Democratic leadership, but conceived on a bipartisan basis, the plan went into operation after the Republicans had seized the majority.

Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) said yesterday that he and other Democrats who supported the streamlining plan believe "we had better try to improve upon it as soon as possible in lots of ways."

Wherry told a reporter, however, "I think we will go through the new session without trying any amendments."

Pepper said that success of the streamlining plan to date is questionable.

"We still have too many committees and too much overlap between this work and the actual Senate sessions," he said. "I know that during the recent session most Senators had two and three committee sessions running at the same time."

Truman Pays Visit to Kids At Catoctin

By the United Press

President Truman highlighted an otherwise quiet restful day at Shangri-la—his mountain retreat in the Catoctin Mountains of Maryland—today with a surprise visit to the nearby Greentop Camp for crippled children.

With Mr. Truman himself at the wheel, the President and his staff drove over to the camp to give the 106 young campers a day they won't forget.

They had scarcely 15 minutes warning that the President was coming, but, by the time he got there, they were lined up in front of their main lodge. They gave him a rousing welcome, cheering, singing and crowding around his Cadillac convertible.

Mr. Truman, dressed in a brown stripe seersucker suit and a soft Panama hat, grinned broadly at the unrestrained reception.

He was shown about the spacious ground by Camp Director Ernest Marx and Executive Director Mary Church of the Maryland League for Crippled Children. The league maintains the camp as a summer retreat for handicapped boys and girls from 7 to 15 years of age.

The President showed a keen interest in the league's work, and he visited with the camp staff and

3 Boys Are Killed When Clubhouse Explodes, Burns

Danville, Ill., Aug 3 (AP).—Three high school boys were burned to death early today and a fourth was reported near death after a series of explosions and a fire destroyed their back-yard clubhouse.

The dead are Howard Phelps, 16; Harry L. Culp, 18, and John L. Hinner, 17, residents of the village of Tilton, 2 miles southwest of here. All attended Danville High School.

Paul Phelps, 17, a brother of Howard, who was graduated from high school in June, was hospitalized with first and second degree burns covering most of his body. He was not expected to live.

The remains of a can of gasoline were found in the charred rubble.

Budwesky Fires Parting Shots As City Attorney Takes Reins

Alexandria's form of government drew some sharp parting fire from ousted City Manager Carl L. Budwesky yesterday as 45-year-old Joseph M. Pancoast took over the community's administrative reins.

Budwesky said administrative confusion has resulted from the form of city government adopted in 1932, when a new city charter deprived the city manager of broad powers with which he had previously been vested.

Although the original city manager form of government made the manager administrative head of virtually all local departments, he said, the new charter divided supervisory powers between the city manager and the council.

In many instances, the city manager merely serves as an intermediary between the council and department heads, Budwesky declared, and there is no clear-cut distinction between the powers of each.

Budwesky's statement was part of political developments marked by the resignations of four key city officials and the threatened resignation of a fifth.

Acting City Manager Pancoast will carry a dual responsibility. He will continue as city attorney while serving as city manager until the council can find a "competent and trained" man for the latter job.

The city attorney, who accepted the manager appointment with reluctance, made it clear he is definitely not a candidate for the permanent job. As temporary city manager, however, he will receive the $8500 annual salary authorized for that post, instead of his city attorney's pay of $5000.

A native of Virginia and a graduate of National University here, Pancoast has been Alex-

Ford Peace Negotiations Deadlocked

BULLETIN

Detroit, Aug. 3 (AP).—CIO United Auto Workers ended eight hours of bargaining today with an announcement that only a last-minute truce could stave off a strike of 107,000 Ford Motor Co. production workers at Tuesday noon.

Detroit, Aug. 3 (AP).—A union leader injected a note of optimism as negotiators seeking to head off a shutdown of the Ford Motor Co.'s vast industrial empire by Tuesday went into today's second bargaining session.

Officials of the CIO United Auto Workers went ahead, however, with plans to strike Ford's 46 plants, employing 107,000 persons, within two days.

Richard T. Leonard, UAW vice president and national Ford director, reported after a morning negotiating session that the company had made a counterproposal to the union's demand for protection against the Taft-Hartley Act. However, he declined to elaborate.

Pension Plan Unacceptable

He added that Ford's pension plan, the other major issue in the dispute, still was unacceptable to the union, but would be discussed further.

"We still have hopes," Leonard declared as he reentered the hotel negotiation room this afternoon.

A decision on the exact time of the walkout was left to Leonard and he said a strike, if called, would "undoubtedly start Tuesday."

James F. Dewey, private mediator who aided in settling the last general Ford strike in 1941 and the General Motors strike of last year, appeared unexpectedly in Detroit today, saying he had been assigned by Director Edgar L. Warren of the United States Conciliation Service to stand by.

"The Government has no desire to interfere as long as there is a chance of agreement," Dewey said.

Some Improvement Seen

During a company caucus in the afternoon negotiations, Leonard told newsmen the Ford counter-proposal to the union's demand for exemption from the legal liability for contract violations under the Taft-Hartley Act was "some improvement" over a proposal made last week by Henry Ford 2d, company president.

Ford had asked the union to agree to certain "good faith" conditions to prevent unauthorized strikes, if the company waived its rights under the Taft-Hartley Act.

Meanwhile, the union's metropolitan Detroit strike strategy committee, representing an estimated 80,000 Ford workers, issued a statement urging union members not "to jump the gun" and to await orders from union committeemen before taking any action.

Leonard also said the Taft-Hartley provision was the only matter discussed in today's two negotiating sessions and that nothing about the projected pension plan had been mentioned.

British Crisis Might Affect U. S. as Well

Review of World Partnership May Be Necessary, Say Surprised Officials

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Staff Writer

Reports of a new British crisis, apparently taking American officials by surprise, may force a review soon on the whole state of American-British "partnership" in world affairs.

Authorities here said last night that if the British situation is as grave as pictured in reports coming from London during the past week then the emergency in which the United States finds itself may be very great indeed.

However, the first aim of these authorities was described as being to get all the facts. Up to this point they have consistently taken the position that while Britain would need additional help in dollars fairly soon, the Marshall Plan for European recovery could be put through soon enough to provide that help.

Take Pessimistic View

Great importance is attached here to British Prime Minister Atlee's report to the Commons Wednesday.

American authorities feel that the first great question raised by Britain's predicament is a question of dollars but that the second and more fundamental issue is a question of production. In general they take a pessimistic view of the Britain long-term future unless Britain's production, especially of essentials such as coal, can be built up rapidly.

Top officials here describe themselves as willing to seek congressional approval for every dollar of American assistance to Europe which can be properly justified, but insist that the basis for justification must be Europe's determination to help itself. That, in essence, is the Marshall Plan.

Concerned About Effect

Thus, the American view of Atlee's forthcoming report will be concerned probably more with what he wants Britain to do about its own problem than what he thinks the United States ought to do about it. Nevertheless, it is evident that, if there are "justifiable" measures which America can take to help the British hold out pending completion of the Marshall Plan, those measures probably will be taken.

The really serious point of concern here is the effect that Britain's recurrent financial crises has on United States planning.

In parts of the world (such as Germany and Greece), where political or economic stability depends on British-American cooperation, the balance is certain to be upset to the degree that the British have to withdraw from their responsibility and the Americans have to take over.

Search of U. S. Airfields Fails To Find Dominican Planes

By International News Service

A two-day search of airfields in Florida and other southeastern States had failed yesterday to clear Florida and other Southeastern rumored plans of Dominican Republic revolutionaries to fly seven combat planes to their homeland from the United States.

A widespread hunt for the planes — former United States Army fighter aircraft—was set in motion by a State Department request to United States customs officials in Florida.

The State Department had heard from an unofficial source that two P-38s and five P-51s, probably bought as surplus from the Army, were being flown to the Caribbean republic, center of recent rumors regarding alleged attempts of "Communist revolutionaries" to overthrow the government of Gen. Rafael Trujillo Molina.

Officials said these precautions were taken to make sure that United States territory would not be used for a "conspiracy" aimed at one of the American republics."

Neither the State Department nor the Customs Bureau had received any report yesterday indicating that any trace of the planes had been found, and the Civil Aeronautics Authority and Army Air Forces were likewise without information.

The possibility was considered that the seven craft had made their getaway before the customs officials started their search, but there have been no reports of arrival of strange planes in the Dominican Republic.

For more than a week, the Dominican army has been on the alert because of rumors of plans of Dominican exiles in Cuba to launch a military expedition from Cuba and to attempt landing on the Dominican coast.

7 Missing Planes Reported in Dominica

New York, Aug. 3 (U.P.).—Dominican exiles asserted today that seven missing warplanes reported to be ready to take off from a Florida field to support an alleged revolutionary movement against the Dominican Republic actually belonged to President Rafael Trujillo and already had arrived in his country.

It was asserted that the planes

Republicans Ask Close Supervision By Security Council To Insure Terms

Batavia, Java, Aug. 3 (AP).—Both the Dutch and the Indonesian Republic announced tonight they were willing to abide by the United Nations Security Council for a cessaition of hostilities in the East Indies.

Acting Gov. Gen. Hubertus J. van Mook ordered troops in the rich Pacific islands to cease firing at midnight tomorrow (1 p. m. Monday, Eastern Daylight Time).

The Republican government in a formal statement signed by Premier Amir Sjarifoeddin declared it was "agreeable to a cessation of hostilities and this cessation of hostilities can be effected."

First U. N. Peacemaking

The announcements from both sides marked the first positive result from a direct attempt by the United Nations to halt a conflict.

While Van Mook moved to comply with the demand of the Security Council, he declared his government remained convinced the Council's resolution "constitutes an interference in the internal affairs" of the Netherlands kingdom.

There still was disagreement on the question of arbitration. Van Mook emphasized that the Netherlands had accepted the good offices of the United States to bring about a settlement after the cease fire.

The Republican government, however, expressed a desire for arbitration by several nations.

The republic also formally requested the Security Council to "continuously supervise the execution" of the cease fire. The republic said it was "prepared to concert all its efforts for the execution of the cessation of hostilities."

Indicating the Dutch expect to retain control of at least some Republican areas overrun by Netherlands troops in recent fighting, Van Mook said: "As soon as reports make it possible, those parts of Java and Sumatra where the Netherlands government will take over direct responsibility for law and order will be clearly indicated."

Last Big Port Seized

The Indonesians want Dutch troops withdrawn to positions they held before hostilities began July 20.

A Dutch communique said Dutch landing parties seized the burning port of Tjilatjap on the south coast of Java 115 miles west of the Republican capital of Jogjakarta.

This virtually sealed up the Republican forces in the interior of the island since Tjilatjap was the last important Javanese port remaining in Indonesian hands.

The communique said Indonesians fired the town and the harbor.

In Batavia, A. K. Gani, deputy premier of the republic, and six other Indonesian leaders were released by Netherlands authorities from house arrest under which they had been held since July 20.

Russians Still Build for War, Say Ex-POWs

Hungarians Come Home and Tell of Alerts Beyond Urals

Budapest, Aug. 3 (AP).—A Hungarian official who has interviewed approximately 5000 prisoners returned from Russia said today they had told him Russia still produces war materials and in some centers practices blackouts and air raid alerts.

He added he had been told "very secret" factories were in operation "beyond the Urals" and that persons who went there to work were not expected to return.

Most of those interviewed who had been allowed to work while held prisoner had been employed in factories in and about Kharkov, Kiev and Leningrad. They described practice alerts and other wartime conditions.

At Kharkov, the informant said, the Russians were building new heavy tanks bigger than anything seen during the war by any of the Hungarian workers. At Kiev the main product was 30-centimeter antiaircraft rifles. Heavy machinery was built at Leningrad.

The informant said returning prisoners related that many workers for plants beyond the Urals came from the ranks of Red army troops returned "from the west." Soldiers returning from capitalistic areas were given special orientation lectures, and after careful screening were either sent back to prewar pursuits or kept in the army and assigned to the plants beyond the Urals. He said those who expressed any attraction for western European culture were likely to obtain employment beyond the Urals.

Among others returning, he said, were two Hungarians who went to Russia in a group of 4000 at the outbreak of the war to volunteer. The group contained Hungarians, Poles, Czechs and Ruthenes and was arrested on arrival and imprisoned as "Fascist spies," he said.

Later it was conceded they were not Fascist spies but they remained in interment camps until this year. The two remaining Hun-

Dimitrov-Tito Aim Hinted as Balkan Union

But Bulgarian Says Time Is Not Ripe Yet For Slav Federation

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Aug. 3 (AP).—Bulgarian Premier Georgi Dimitrov has indicated that his talks with Premier Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia may be the first step toward formation of a Balkan federation.

He explained that both Bulgaria and Yugoslavia did not believe the time was ripe now for "the creation of a federation of South Slav countries or a Balkan or Danubian Basin federation."

Dimitrov, who arrived today at Sofia talked with newsmen here after Bulgaria and Yugoslavia had concluded a political, economic and social agreement under which they promised to aid each other and work toward a full customs union. The pact was reached during talks in Tito's summer palace in Bled.

Denies Aim at Any Power

The Bulgarian Premier said the Bled pact was not directed against any other power and added:

"We have taken the obligation to do everything in order that the Balkans once and for all will cease to be a power keg and a peril to the general peace.

"We are completely aware that the situation in the Balkans is insecure at the present moment, that civil war in Greece and the situation in Turkey as well as foreign intrigues being made in those countries represent to some extent an obstacle to our own development and the consolidation of relations between our two republics.

"We are interested that the Greek people, our close neighbors, succeed in liberating their own country and in reaching a development achieved by our own people."

He said Bulgaria and Yugoslavia "have laid and are laying" before the United Nations Security Council the question of ending what he described as the "provocations of the Greek monarcho-Fascists which are taking place at our frontier."

At a formal dinner in Bled following the signing, Tito said:

"We desire to live in peace. We

Army Overhauls System for Better Use of Scientists

The War Department announced yesterday it expects to revise its classification system so as to place trained scientists in strategic positions where full use can be made of their knowledge.

The announcement followed a survey which indicated that the armed services in the last war did not make full use of the Nation's scientifically-trained manpower.

The poll of 31,000 recognized American chemists showed that 47 per cent of younger scientists in World War II considered that their scientific knowhow had been used only to small advantage, or not at all, during their tour of duty.

Among older scientists, however, the survey showed that 75 per cent of those who served found their talents had been used adequately in war work.

Wear Your Coat to Dinner, Washington Males Advised

Men are being partially emancipated from the Washington swelters with feather-weight suits—but they'll have to wear linen kilts and sandals to under-dress the women.

Summer complaints by males have moved suit and shirt manufacturers to merciful action. The result can bring a man's summertime garb down to an impeccable four pounds, 12 ounces, including a pocket kerchief—but a woman, equally well-dressed, uses exactly three pounds complete with girdle.

Just how ar can a man go in getting rid of that unfair weight advantage, and still get by without wide-eyed stares from passersby?

You can wear a sport shirt in this hot weather without a jacket in the office and on the street, and a majority of Washington area residents will agree with you, The Washington Post finds

But when dining out, hold on to that jacket. And that tie had better remain under your Adam's apple both in the office and when eating out. On the street, tieless men will draw stares only from one out of every two persons—if that is any consolation.

Only one thing is certain. No matter what you wear, somebody is bound to agree with you, as shown by The Washington Post Poll's interviews with a representative cross-section of people living in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

"In the summer do you personally think men should wear their jackets in the office? On the street? In restaurants?"

The same question was asked about wearing sport shirts and neckties.

Here are their answers:

	Of All Groups	Of those aged: 21-29	30-44	45-up
Correct to go without a jacket:
In the office	79%	81%	84%	75%
In restaurants	42	30	42	47
On the street	66	55	69	67
Correct to wear a sport shirt:
In the office	66%	61%	66%	61%
In restaurants	64	50	63	66
On the street	80	67	81	78
Correct to go without ties:
In the office	42%	33%	42%	47%
In restaurants	35	29	33	40
On the street	50	50	49	50

The younger generation, both men and women, surprisingly are slightly more conservative about clothes reform than older people.

On an average, however, men and women differ little in their opinions on what men should wear in the summer. That finding should help spike some of the oft-heard reports that women champion summer clothes comfort for men, while men resist the effort.

What, then, is the sweltering male's alternative? His shoes alone—an average 10½-C—weigh only 14 ounces less than an average woman's entire outfit. Here are

Capsized Canoe Found

2 Youths, Believed Drowning Victims, Sought in Little River

Harbor police last night dragged the Little River near Roosevelt Island for two youths believed drowned when their capsized canoe was found floating in the Potomac River just south of Francis Scott Key Bridge.

Believed drowned were Wallace Phelps, 22, of 2203 Evarts st. ne. and Norman Matlow, 20 1345 Saratoga ave. ne.

Raymond Wanner of Wanner's Canoe Club, 37th and K sts. nw., identified the canoe as one rented from him. He said the receipt for it had been signed by Matlow. The youth's mother, Mrs. Anna Matlow, said the two left her house about 3 p. m.

The overturned craft was discovered about 5 p. m. by Paul Anderson of 3900 Cathedral ave. nw., while canoeing between Roosevelt Island and the Virginia shore.

The body of James B. Hendrix, 62, of 1363 Pennsylvania ave. se., who fell from a cabin cruiser off the foot of King st., Alexandria, Saturday night has not yet been recovered.

Hendrix was returning from an evening cruise with John Gilbert, 2806 Terrace rd. se., and John M. Crandall, 518 14th st. se., in the latter's 33-foot motor launch when the accident occurred, police learned.

Hendrix leaned overside to look for a buoy and fell overboard. Crandall jumped in the Potomac after him, but Hendrix slipped from his grasp and disappeared.

Hughes' F-11 Plane Stands On Its Merits, Pepper Says

tion, had charged most of this off against its income tax.

Meantime, the transcontinental argument continued between Hughes and Senator Brewster (R., Me.), chairman of the full committee.

Brewster said yesterday he hoped to expose "what I would term the whites of his lies" when Hughes takes the stand this week.

In a radio interview on the Ed-Hart Forum (WINX), he said he was waiting to see "how far he (Hughes) would be willing to go" in reiterating under oath the charges he has made against Brewster.

Brewster took occasion to deny again that he had any direct or indirect connection with Pan American Airlines. Hughes has charged in California that Brewster put offers to call off the investigation into Hughes' contracts if a merger were arranged between Pan American and Trans World Airlines.

Hughes owns a major share of stock in TWA.

"I think the records of the committee will show there is nothing whatever to that suggestion," Brewster declared.

Cites Unanimous Action

He said that the investigation of the Hughes contracts began in 1942 with a public hearing by the committee July 30 of that year, under the chairmanship of President Truman, then a Democratic Senator from Missouri.

He said the committee has acted unanimously on all aspects of the inquiry, with the four Democratic members going along with the six Republicans.

Told there was a report that Sam Pryor, former Republican national committeeman from Connecticut, had agreed to back Brewster actively for the 1948 GOP vice presidential nomination if Brewster would aid Pan American, the Maine Senator said in the interview that he thought Pryor would be otherwise "preoccupied."

Joint Appearance Planned

A lot of people would be interested in knowing the man who might be able to "deliver" the vice presidential nomination, Brewster said, indicating that he did not believe any such individual exists.

The chairman said the committee was primarily interested in the Hughes inquiry in finding out why the Government spent or committed approximately 40 million dollars and "up to this time hasn't received anything for it."

Hughes, in an article in the Los Angeles Examiner Saturday night said Brewster's disclaimer of any connections with Pan American Airways "is about as naive a piece of pulp-magazine literature as I have ever heard."

Ferguson announced that Roosevelt, appearing without subpena, would be asked to sit down alongside Meyer on the stand and supply answers where the former found his memory at fault.

He kept Meyer under subpena for appearances through Friday, apparently as part of a determination to have him available for testimony when Hughes appears. Hughes has said he doesn't want to go through any such dual witness procedure. He has said he will be here Wednesday, ignoring an order to appear "forthwith."

Draft Quiz Again Today

Meyer's wartime draft record also may be laid before the committee today. Senator Cain (R., Wash.), who brought up the subject, said he wanted to know whether Meyer actually entered into the negotiation of contracts, as Cain said was stipulated in a draft deferment affidavit signed by Gerald Coxe of the Hughes company.

Cain said Meyer had six deferments. Meyer replied that he had four dependents, father, mother and two aunts.

Tom Slack, Houston, Tex., attorney representing Hughes, said he would get the draft records before the committee.

All of this left the hearings primed for today's further excursion into Meyer's expense accounts.

Pepper told a reporter he thought that the names of others who enjoyed entertainment paid for by Meyer on Hughes' expense account ought to come out, adding:

"Elliott Roosevelt was not the only one entertained during the war."

home, preparing for a two-day debate in the Commons starting Wednesday. He was expected to outline an austerity program unpreceednted in any big Western country in peacetime.

Expect Import Cuts

This program was expected to include cuts in imports, restriction of gasoline for pleasure use, reduction of foreign exchange allowances for pleasure trips abroad, restriction of nonessential industries, reduction in the clothing ration, wartime overtime in essential industries and drastic reductions in the armed forces.

It is reported Britain will ask the United States to ease those clauses in the Anglo-American loan agreement which restricts her trade with her colonies and to relieve her of paying British occupation costs in Germany in dollars.

Douglas is to confer with Clayton tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday. Clayton was understood to have left Geneva, where he is attending an international trade conference, to meet Douglas.

Papers Headline Crisis

The British public was greeted this morning by such shrieking newspaper headlines as:

"Government to Freeze Labor," "Million and a Half Workers May Have to Switch Jobs," "Cabinet Debates Capital Levy on Employers," "Crisis Breaks," "Cabinet's Crisis Plans Will Shock Country—and America," "Crisis—Cabinet Standing by."

All cabinet members were in touch throughout the weekend with Attlee and their own departments.

Returning Germans Found Unfit for Work

Berlin, Aug. 3 (AP).—All German prisoners of war returning from Russia into the United States occupation zone of Germany are in such poor physical condition that they are unfit for work and many may never be able to work again, the American Military Government said today.

Rehabilitation to make any of them fit for employment requires three to six months' care in camps on extra food rations provided from foreign relief supplies, an official report added.

The report's 10-line account was believed to be AMG's first official comment on the physical state of German prisoners, now being released by the Russians at an accelerated rate after two years or more of labor. There have, however, been frequent published charges by Germans that the Russians released only prisoners no longer able to work.

The military government report said about 1500 POWs were arriving weekly in the United States zone from the Soviet Union, a rate expected to continue until December. The report continued:

"All those being returned are unfit for employment, but less than 10 per cent are actually hospitalized after they reach the United States zone. They are placed in reception camps at Hersfeld in Hesse, Ulm in Wuerttemberg-Baden and Hof in Bavaria, where care is provided until families can call for the men or other plans can be made."

Vandervelde, who actually exercises top civil control for the Dutch on the entire island, said the Dutch advances had ended an impossible economic situation.

Other Dutch officials repeatedly have said that Netherlands forces were engaged only in "police action" against the Indonesians.

Vandervelde indicated that the Dutch objectives on Sumatra would be limited primarily to the tea, rubber, tobacco and coconut estates along the northeastern coast and the oil fields around Palembang in the southeast.

landed on Trujillo's estate near Trujillo City, the capital.

The exiles' statement also denied reports that three vessels containing revolutionary forces had left Cuba for an "invasion" of the Dominican Republic.

J. A. Bonille Atiles, secretary of the Dominican Revindication Association, composed of political exiles here, said the State Department could easily confirm that the planes actually were in the Dominican Republic.

His statement also said the entire story that exiles plotted a revolutionary invasion was "an invention" of Trujillo and the Dominican Ambassador at Washington, Hulio Ortega Frier.

Ortega had alleged in Washington that an army of revolutionaries from Cuba, Venezuela, Puerto Rico and elsewhere was being trained in Cuba.

Seven Persons Robbed Here Over Weekend

Asleep, aswim and afoot, Washingtonians and visitors were victims over the weekend of the District's light-fingered and heavy-handed.

Roosevelt Adams, 36, of Savannah, Ga., reported to police here yesterday that someone sliced his trouser pocket with a razor while he slept and removed his billfold, with $20 in cash and cards. The robbery occurred as he slept Saturday night in his express truck at a parking lot at 6th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw.

Elmer Butler, 49, of 728 5th st. nw., reported he missed $76, a watch, and his car and house keys when he returned to his clothes after a swim in the Potomac River, Saturday afternoon. He told police he left the clothes on the bank above Fletcher's boathouse, upstream from Key Bridge.

Albert T. Highland of 611 Rock Creek Church rd. nw., 60-year-old timekeeper at the Ambassador Hotel, said he was yoked and robbed of $37 by a man at 2 a. m. yesterday. He was attacked from behind, he told police, in the 600 block of Massachusetts ave. nw.

Mollie McClanahan, 38, of 1445 Otis pl. nw, told police a purse snatcher grabbed her handbag containing $15 in cash at 9 a. m., yesterday, while she was walking to church. The robber fled afoot through an alley in the 800 block of N st. nw.

Robert Webb, 1427 U st. nw., reported to police last night that his apartment's front door lock was jimmied, the apartment entered and two suits of clothes and a suitcase taken some time late Saturday.

M. W. Boxley, 1322 U st. nwfl, reported his residence was entered some time last week and an Army officer's overcoat, trench coat and other clothing were taken. Boxley told police he suspects a man with a goatee.

Joseph A. Burger, 11 9th st. ne., reported to police yesterday the loss of 41 pieces of clothing, a black leather suitcase and two slide rules, taken from his car parked in front of his house. Burger said the right front vent window of his car had been forced open.

400 Cases of War Contract Fraud Reported by Royall

By the United Press

Secretary of War Kenneth C. Royall reported last night that 400 cases of fraud on war contracts have been reported to the Justice Department, resulting in the indictment of 388 persons and 31 corporations.

The individuals and corporations indicted were involved in 71 war fraud cases. They paid fines totaling $386,412 and a large number of prison sentences were imposed.

Reporting on his activities as Undersecretary of War, Royall said that 56 civil cases involving War Department contracts have been disposed of with settlement or judgment for a total of $10,508,871.49.

"In all contract and settlement matters there was a careful scrutiny for possible fraud," he said. "Some frauds were discovered by the department, a few additional ones by the General Accounting Office and the Department of Justice."

He reported that the department awarded 1,188,029 contracts during World War II. Renegotiation and settlement has resulted in a saving of $2,100,000,000 gross and 633 million dollars net recovery of excess profits during the last two years.

With renegotiation 98½ per cent complete, he said, recoveries during and since the war now amount to $6,900,000,000 gross and $2,100,000,000 net, including $3,250,000,000 in savings from voluntary reductions.

Reporting on the progress of demobilization, he said that 60 government-owned plants costing $2,301,000,000 have been set aside as standby plants necessary for national defense. They have been leased to private industry and the remainder have been declared surplus.

Royall said that the Army-Navy Munitions Board has purchased for stockpiling scarce strategic materials totaling 81 million dollars. Some 300 million dollars more has been selected from surplus property.

Boy, 6, Killed as Police Fire on Fleeing Man

New York, Aug. 3 (INS).—A 6-year-old child was killed tonight as New York policemen fired at an escaping prisoner, wanted in a murder case.

The prisoner, Nicholas Marianoccio, 19, was seriously injured by the shots and recaptured.

Marianoccio broke away from two policemen who sought to arrest him in the Bronx.

Both men immediately drew their guns and fired. One bullet killed 6-year-old Emile Urrutia who was sitting in a parked car with his father nearby.

the children for more than half an hour.

He walked the mile back to Shangri-La in time to take a cool dip in the pool before lunch.

Mr. Truman enjoyed a quiet afternoon, napping and chatting with his staff. White House Aide William Hassett dropped in to say hello, but otherwise there were no official callers.

Returns This Forenoon

The White House said the President signed no bills and wouldn't return to Washington until this forenoon.

The lodge is in the heart of four camp areas in the Catoctin National Park near Thurmont, Md., about 65 miles north of the capital. It was a favorite retreat of the late President Roosevelt during the hectic war years.

The President drove to Shangri-La Friday afternoon for a few days rest after the rigorous 10 days during which he flew to Missouri, to bury his 94-year-old mother.

Bladensburg Merger Vote Going to Court

A court ruling will be sought on the legality of votes cast by Newton Village residents in Friday's four-community referendum on the proposed merger with Bladensburg.

Headley Gasch, who supervised the voting, said the Newton Village ballots, still uncounted, have been sealed and will be held for the Prince Georges County Circuit Court. They had been numbered by mistake, he explained, thereby made possibly illegal as secret votes.

Only one community, Sunnybrook, voted for the merger. It will be incorporated with Bladensburg under a new charter and form of government. The others, Villa Heights and Rogers Heights, voted against incorporation overwhelmingly and will maintain their present status.

The Sunnybrook vote was 87 to 79; Villa Heights voted against, 115 to 12, and Rogers Heights, 292 to 44.

Candidate Seeks Telephone Pole Poster Decision

Albert A. Carretta, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Arlington representative to the House of Delegates, yesterday asked the Arlington County Board either to enfroce or repeal the ordinance prohibiting fixing posters on telephone poles.

Carretta, in an appearance before the board yesterday morning, said that the practice which some candidates in Tuesday's Democratic primary have followed of having posters distributed over county telephone poles is "an open and notorious violation of the county ordinance."

C. L. Kinnier of the county planning department, explained that the posters have been torn off the poles by an employe in his department. After yesterday's meeting, County Manager A. T. Lundberg instructed police to tear down the posters wherever they find them.

Provisions Met

Egypt's New Law Easy on U. S. Firms

Cairo, Aug. 3 (AP).—Egypt's new company law guaranteeing employment to Egyptians in foreign firms will have little effect on American, British, Dutch and Greek companies now operating there, their representatives indicated today.

The law, a controversial subject in Egypt for months, specifies the percentage of Egyptians that any foreign or joint stock company must include in its personnel and also the percentage of the payroll the Egyptian workers are to receive. The law was approved by King Farouk last Thursday and is to be effective in three months.

The largest American company in Cairo is Transworld Air lines, but of its 950 employes, 823 are already Egyptians, far more than the law specifies.

A spokesman for the Shell group of oil companies, owned by the Dutch and British, said the companies a number of years ago instituted a training program that went a long way toward meeting requirements of the new law.

Greek and British interests recently invested 90,000 pounds ($360,000) in a new chemical concern with a capitalization of 325,000 pounds ($1,250,000). The same group is building a factory and plans to increase capitalization to two million dollars.

Many Egyptian leaders, opposing the law, claimed it was discriminatory and would drive foreign capital from Egypt. Others said the law was a reform long overdue and that only "fly-by-night" capital would be kept out.

One British source declared the statute was wrong in principle, saying anyone could work in England if he had resided in the country five years. He said the boards of directors of English companies could be entirely foreign.

Autoists Lose 100 Parking Spots on 17th

Automobile parking along newly reopened 17th st. from Constitution ave. south to the John Paul Jones statue at the Tidal Basin was banned yesterday by the National Capital Parks office.

The street, used by up to 40,000 vehicles a day, provided parking accommodations for about a hundred cars.

Coincident with this loss of parking space it appeared that all-day parking on the roadways around the Ellipse will be prohibited and a rigid two-hour parking limitation imposed.

No change in parking regulations on the Ellipse will be made, however, until completion of a contract for repaving the roadways, which has been let to Corson & Gruman Co. The $62,715 job is scheduled to be completed by October 31.

Replacement of cobblestone gutters by curbing, which narrowed the street, made the 17th street parking ban necessary, Harry T. Thompson, assistant superintendent, National Capital Parks, said yesterday.

Unlimited Immigration Seen As Only 'Cure' for Palestine

Jerusalem, Aug. 3 (AP).—The average Jewish working man and woman in Palestine are opposed to the violent tactics of the underground but almost all believe that unlimited Jewish immigration is the only solution leading to peace and prosperity.

This cross-section of opinion was found at the Workers' Club off King George ave. in the six-story building housing headquarters of the Palestine labor federation. The Workers' Club serves excellent meals at prewar prices to anyone, member or not, and the quality of its fare is on a par with that served at the King George Hotel.

Bus Driver Talks

A bus driver, Moshe Cohen, thought carefully when asked if he thought Jewish immigration would create unemployment and if it was worth all the trouble it creates.

"It all depends on how you feel about your family," he said, "I still have mine in Poland and would like them to come here. They want to come. But if you want peace here, the way to do it is through immigration. Give the Jews immigration and you will have Haganah go into a shooting operation against those extremists.

"I know Haganah will not fight the Irgun Zvai Leumi and Stern Group until it has a leg to stand on. This it does not have as long as there is no immigration."

Zecharia Rehavia, a Yemenite bartender at the Cafe Vienna who eats at the workers' club, joined in the conversation from the next table.

"I meet all types of Jews," he said. "Here's what they say: Unless you have immigration, there will be no business. People are not building houses because labor is too costly, but because there is a big shortage.

"My boss, owner of the Cafe Vienna, says he won't renovate the place until new faces turn up."

Yehuda Levy, clerk in the office of a British-Jewish lawyer, said: "Unless you have more coming, there will be no investments, no contracts, not even money from America."

Hava Danziger, 24, a blue-eyed, dark-haired German Jewess who is a kindergarten teacher, said "there will be a terrible slump in underground 'shares' if immigration starts."

"The Irgun goes around saying the British do not want us here," she said. "I don't believe it, but you have got to prove it."

The waitress, a tall Polish Jewess, when asked what she thought of the type of immigrants reaching Palestine now, said "I agree that they are not altogether healthy. They saw too much. But come and see the children of my neighbors, a family of newly arrived immigrants. The children are unspoiled. The next generation will be the real test."

King Approves India Nominees

London, Aug. 3 (U.P.). — King George VI has approved the appointed of Admiral Viscount Mountbatten, present Viceroy of India, as governor-general of the new predoninantly Hindu Dominion of India to take effect August 15, it was announced tonight.

The King also approved the appointment of Mohammed Ali Jinnah, Moslem League leader who raised the cry for a separate Moslem state 17 years ago, as governor-general of the Dominion of Pakistan. He too will take over August 15.

Russian Asks Veto Power On Jap Pact

Moscow, Aug. 3 (U.P.).—Soviet Political Writer Boris Leontiev today reiterated Russian demands for full veto power in the writing of the Japanese peace treaty because the "entry of the USSR into the war and the brilliant victories of the Soviet army forced Japan to capitulate."

Writing in the official Communist newspaper Pravda, Leontiev also attacked the United States proposal that decisions be made by two-thirds vote, insisting that the same voting procedure of the Paris Peace Conference must prevail to prevent the United States from playing power politics with votes.

Leontiev also insisted that the terms of the peace treaty must be drafted by the Far Eastern Big Four—United States, Britain, China and the USSR—before the conference is held. In inviting the Far Eastern Commission to convene in the United States August 19 to begin work on the treaty, the United States had proposed that the 11 member nations be given equal voice in the drafting of the treaty.

Leontiev said that the same conditions must be insisted upon by the Big Four as in the European treaties. He added that the conditions of Cairo, Yalta and Potsdam declarations must have been fulfilled and demilitarization of Japan assured.

The Soviet Union, he said, earned the right to equal big power voice in writing the Japanese treaty because of the following contributions:

The Soviet smashed the biggest and best Japanese Kwantung army.

The Soviet "inflicted the crushing and complete defeat of Hitlerite Germany which was the main factor in the victory of the Allied powers over Japan.

"The last decisive blow to the Japanese aggressor was inflicted by the Soviet army."

Throughout the war Soviet armed forces immobilized in Manchuria "the most battleworthy" Japanese troops.

"True to Allied duty, it declared war on Japan at the time agreed upon by historical agreements of the great Allies."

U. S. Reported Rejecting Red Jap Peace Plan

By The Associated Press

Top State Department officials were reported yesterday to have decided to reject Russia's proposal to turn over the writing of the Japanese peace treaty to the Council of Foreign Ministers.

This means that if Russia holds firmly to its position the American Government probably will take steps, likely within the week, to proceed with its own plan for beginning work on the Japanese settlement.

This proposal is based on an 11-nation conference to draft the treaty. The time and place of an initial meeting are yet to be negotiated. Also, unless the Russians yield and if the United States acts as expected, it will be a 10 and not an 11-nation meeting.

In addition to Russia and America, the countries which this Government proposed for participation in the work are Britain, France, China, Australia, New ealand, India, Canada, the Philippines and the Netherlands.

The American proposal called for the initial session to begin August 19. However, the British Commonwealth countries asked a later date. The proposal also called for the meeting to be held either in Washington or San Francisco. No decision has yet been made on the place.

The American proposal presented two main issues with Russia: First, the inclusion of small as well as great nations in the original treaty drafting; and, second, the abandonment of the system of veto voting for the great powers which has prevailed in the Council of Foreign Ministers' work on European peace treaties. The Russians objected on both points in a note received here about two weeks ago.

Police Seek Man Who Wounded 2 In Gun Rampage

Police are scouring the city for a 57-year-old man who went on a shooting rampage with a .12-gauge shotgun yesterday morning, splattering two friends with pellets.

Injured were Earl Edward Wilson, 38, 2021 Savannah pl. se., admitted to Gallinger Hospital with 12 wounds about the right side of the neck, face and right leg, and Harold L. Montague, 32, of 2520 12th st. se., released after treatment of abrasions on the left cheek.

The shooting, which police said followed an argument over a girl, occurred in front of Montague's home, at about 10 a. m. Montague told police he had wrested a .22-caliber rifle from the assailant, who then produced the shotgun and began blasting away. Several shots, apparently intended for Montague, missed, ricocheted off a parked truck and hit Wilson. Police recovered the .22, but not the shotgun.

His Country Wants A Peaceful Nippon, Ambassador Says

By Sigred Arue
Associated Press Reporter

Australia's Ambassador to the United States said yesterday his country would insist on reparations from Japan's industrial plant in the hope of removing Nipponese power to make war ever again.

She will also demand, he said, that the forthcoming Japanese peace treaty talks set up an Allied system of control and inspection over Japanese life to insure a peaceful nation.

Just how long Japan will have to be supervised by the Allies, the Ambassador, Norman J. O. Makin, was not prepared to say. But he did tell an interviewer yesterday his government felt the Allies must remain in Japan until the war potential, both in physical plant and psychological attitudes, has been reduced to zero. "And that must depend on the good faith and behavior of the Japanese people themselves," he said.

He outlined his government's stand as follows:

1. An early peace settlement must be negotiated. Australia must play a "primary part" in the talks. Hence, Australia is pleased with the recent suggestion from the United States that the Japanese peace treaty be ironed out by an 11-nation conference where decisions would be taken by a two-thirds vote.

2. Australia will ask that Japan be permanently prohibited from owning any naval or military aircraft, and prohibited from manufacturing or operating even civil aircraft during the period of Allied control. Australia will ask the right to operate airlines to and within Japan.

3. Australia will want to be consulted fully when the Japanese fleet is finally allocated among the Allies.

4. She will not press for reparations that would cripple Japanese economy, Makin said. But she will want the Japanese "war potential removed." She suggests a special committee to work out the industrial machinery that can be removed from Japan, and the manner in which it should be distributed among the Allies.

Englishmen Vie For Spots to See Wedding Parade

London, Aug. 3 (U.P.).—Ceremony-loving Britons are deluging London ticket agencies with requests for good spots to view the wedding procession of Princess Elizabeth and Lieut. Philip Mountbatten.

Although the wedding is not until November 20, bids for balcony, upper story and roof seats have been pouring into reservation agencies.

It was expected that huge grandstands would be erected along the route from the Palace to Westminster Abbey, where the ceremony will be performed.

While it was still unknown who would make the Princess' wedding gown, the baking circle counterpart of this distinction has been awarded to a Reading bakery.

Secretary Forrestal Hails Coast Guard

The U. S. Coast Guard announced yesterday that Admiral Joseph F. Farley, commandant, had received a message from Secretary of the National Defense, James Forrestal in recognition of the Coast Guard's 157th anniversary tomorrow. It said, in part:

"Today, when economic reconstruction and world trade are so vital to the establishment of lasting peace, the Coast Guard is making an invaluable contribution to the welfare and security of the Nation."

Historians to Picnic

In place of its monthy meeting, the Montgomery County Historical Society will hold a picnic August 9 at Sugar Loaf Mountain. R. Use of the recreational facilities there has been extended to the organization by Col. Gordon Strong, owner.

Horse Holidays

New York (U.P.).—Princess Elizabeth, heiress presumptive to the British throne, was fond of horses as a child. According to the World Book Encyclopedia, her teacher told her that one day she might become queen. She exclaimed: "If ever I am queen, the first thing I shall do will be to make a law forbidding people to ride or drive on Sunday. Horses must have a holiday."

two examples of comparable attire to prove it—

Avola Weighs All

Jules Avola, of 1220 Holbrook ter. ne., an assistant buyer in a downtown men's shop who is a champion for sensible dress in summer, added his attire up to four pounds, 12 ounces this way:

An extra lightweight shirt, lightweight shorts—10 ounces.

A cotton-rayon suit—two pounds.

Short hose, woven-perforated shoes and bow tie—two pounds, two ounces.

They did a commendable job of clothing the 6-foot, 180-pound Avola. But—

Stunning Trulie Bowman, a Pearl Atkinson model and Veterans Administration employe, 2332 25th st. se., made no effort to turn the question of clothes-weight into a contest. She weighed the clothes she wore to work:

Yellow linen dress, slip, girdle and bra—two pounds.

Shoe and hose—one pound.

Those three pounds delightfully and decorously covered her 126½ pounds.

FTC Orders Firm to End Gas Saver Ads

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday ordered the Decker Products Co. of Pelham, N. Y., to "cease and desist" from advertising that the exhaust pipe attachment it makes, "Vacudex," will save gasoline or effect other economies in operating cars and trucks.

The decision was resisted strongly by the firm, its attorneys arguing that tests proved the worth of the device and also challenging the authority of the commission to proceed against a patented invention.

They announced they will carry the issue to court.

Consideration Given Tests

Careful consideration was given the tests made for the company, the commission said, but it relied instead on a test by the National Bureau of Standards. This indicated, the commission said, that use of the attachment "does not improve the performance of an engine in any way."

A motion by the company that the commission withhold the press release announcing the decision, pending adjudication of the case, was denied.

Harry S. Hall and J. C. Trimble, counsel for the concern, said in a statement that the legal question in this case "is new and never raised before, and of great interest to inventors and patentees."

This question, they said, is whether the commission can act against an invention which has been regularly and legally issued.

Other Claims Discontinued

The Industrial Management Corp., Los Angeles, has agreed to discontinue certain claims about effectiveness of Aerosol Insect-O-Blitz, the commission also announced.

The corporation, maker of Insect-O-Blitz, no longer will represent that the product kills pests which contact a surface sprayed with it or air charged with the spray, and also will discontinue other claims, FTC said.

The Southern Products Co., Memphis, distributor, also has agreed to cease making similar claims, FTC said.

Royall Statement On Reich Industry Surprises French

Paris, Aug. 3 (AP).—French Foreign Ministry officials expressed great surprise today at statements attributed to United States Secretary of War Kenneth C. Royall that the United States was not obliged to consult France before increasing the level of industry in western Germany.

These officials, admitting that there was no formal contract to that effect, declared Secretary of State Marshall on July 18 wrote Foreign Minister Bidault that the United States would make no statement on the German industrial ceiling before consulting with France. In Berlin Friday, Royall insisted "there is no agreement."

'Real' Pay Lags

Hourly Wage Rate Up for 16th Month

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—Hourly earnings in 25 industries reached a new peak in May, for the sixteenth straight month, the National Industrial Confernce Board reported today.

Weekly earnings also reached a new high, but "real" earnings, adjusted for changes in the consumer's price index, although rising slightly over April, were still below the war years.

In its monthly survey of the 25 industries the Board found average hours, employment and total man-hours lower than in April.

May hourly earnings averaged $1.329, an increase of 1.9 per cent from April, and 12.6 per cent from May 1946.

Weekly earnings averaged $53.59 in May, up 1.5 per cent from April, up 16.1 per cent since May 1946, and 5.1 per cent above the highest point reached during the war. The increase since August 1939 was 96.4 per cent, and since January 1941 it was 75.1 per cent.

"Real" earnings rose 1.6 per cent over April and were 0.3 per cent higher than may 1946, but were lower than during the months from February 1943 through September 1945.

The average work week was 40.4 hours in May, off 0.2 per cent from April, up 2.8 per cent from a year ago, but down 16.4 per cent from 1929.

Employment was cut 0.4 per cent in May, but was 11.8 per cent higher than the previous May, and 26.8 per cent above the 1929 averages.

May payrolls were 1.1 per cent above April and 29.8 per cent above May 1946, and 6.4 per cent below the record in November 1943. The increase since 1929 has amounted to 138 per cent. Seven of the 25 industries reported payrolls lower than in April.

Man-hours dropped 0.6 per cent from April, but the rose 14.8 per cent above May 1946, and 6 per cent above 1929.

Razor Blad Swallower Undaunted by Mishap

Green Bay, Wis., Aug. 3 (U.P.).—Emil Petrick, 50, a professional razor blade swallower, was in the hospital today. After 50 years of munching on blades, one finally went down the wrong way.

A surgeon had to remove the blade, caught in Petrick's throat.

Petrick, known as "the billy goat," said the mishap wasn't much to worry about, however. He said he didn't think he'd give up his life's work just because of one slip of the gullet.

Clements Leads Ky. Primary

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 3 (U.P.).—Representative Earle C. Clements today held a 12,000 vote margin over Harry Lee Waterfield, his chief opponent for Democratic nomination as Governor, but Waterfield's headquarters hoped a count of the rural vote would change the picture.

In the Republican race, State Attorney General Eldon S. Dummit, Lexington, piled up a 10,000-vote margin over his nearest opponent, John Fred Williams, State superintendent of public instruction.

Williams' headquarters also joined with Waterfield in the belief that victory lay in the rural precincts.

Williams was supported by the administration of Gov. Simeon S. Willias and Dummit was backed by the Third and Ninth Congressional District organizations.

Tabulation of votes in the Saturday primaries halted at midnight and will resume tomorrow at 8 a. m. local time.

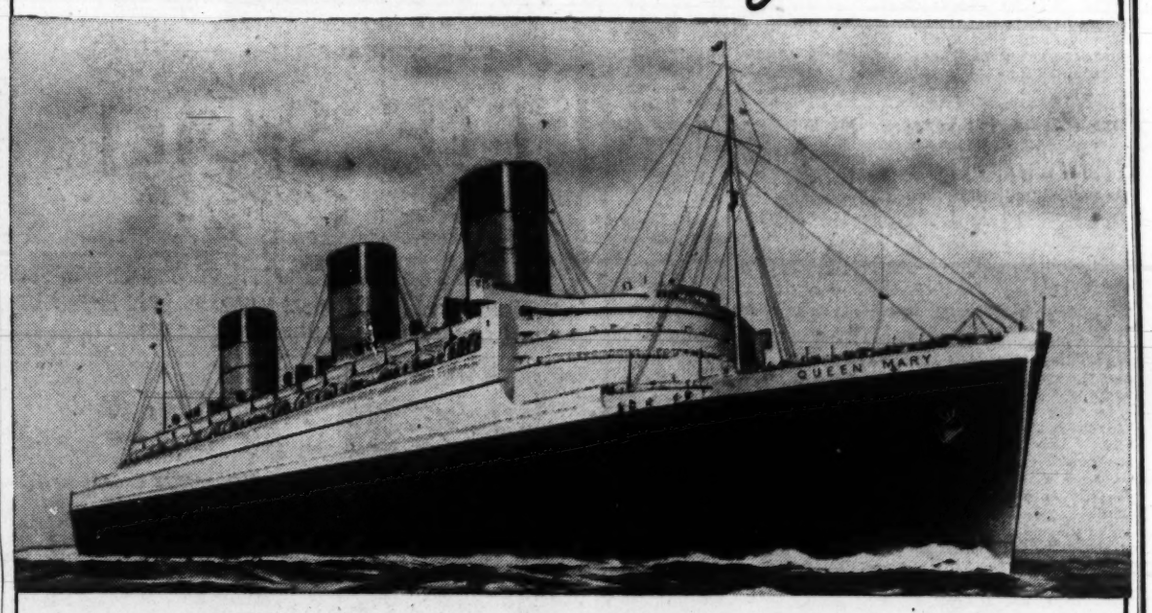
An unofficial and incomplete tally of 2056 of the State's 4048 precincts gave Clements 92,687 votes, Waterfield, 70,807, and Robert E. Lee Murphy, Lexington attorney, 225. The same precinct total gave Dummit 81,147, Williams, 21,409, and the third GOP candidate, Jesse Knox, Frankfort, 1359.

BBC to Beam Program Crewe to Crewe, Va

Crewe, Va., Aug. 3 (AP).—The British Broadcasting Corp. will beam a program from Crewe, England, Tuesday, to Crewe, Va., as a friendly aftermath of acquaintances made and remembered by a Virginia soldier who visited the English city while recuperating from wounds received in Germany.

The Virginian, Stuart Atkinson of Crewe, now a civilian on an English tour, will be master of ceremonies on the British broadcast.

THE Queen Mary RETURNS



Measure her not by her 81,000 tons as she steams majestically up New York harbor to complete her first post-war luxury voyage.

Consider her not merely as the world's fastest liner, but rather as one of the mighty links joining two peoples in friendship.

Look at her through the eyes of her Master, proud of her great heritage and the officers and men who man her. See her in the memories of three-quarters of a million Allied service personnel who sailed in her during the grim war years.

Picture her passengers enjoying the comforts she offers . . . her more-beautiful-than-ever salons and decks and cabins, her new, exciting features and decorations. Note their pleasure in the unsurpassed excellence of her cuisine, the courtesy of her crew . . . their tradition of fine seamanship.

All these are the Queen Mary—things of the spirit that make her what she is, a ship close to the hearts of the great nations she serves.

Sailing alternately each week from New York, the Queen Mary and the Queen Elizabeth, the world's fastest and largest liners, provide a dependable express service to all Europe. As accommodations are already booked many weeks ahead, may we suggest you see your local Travel Agent now for future reservations or apply to Cunard White Star, 1504 K Street, N. W., Washington.

Wedemeyer Seen as China Aid Harbinger

Peiping, China, Aug. 3 (U.P.)—Diplomatic circles expressed the opinion today that the China-touring mission of Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer foreshadowed substantial but strictly-supervised American aid to the Chinese government.

The fact-finding mission wound up its three-day visit to Peiping and prepared to depart tomorrow, on a flight tour over civil war battle zones, with stops at Tientsin, Tsingtao and Mukden.

Most diplomats here felt the mission would recommend to President Truman that the United States assist, in some degree, the regime of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Sweethearts From Nazi Camp Joined in Marriage Here

The Washington Post

CLIMAX TO ROMANCE—Manfred Gruenebaum, 21, and his bride, Bettina, are pictured after their marriage here yesterday, culminating a romance begun when they were prisoners in a Lithuanian concentration camp in 1941

A romance born behind the barbed wire barricades of a Lithuanian concentration camp culminated in a marriage here yesterday.

It was a happy ending to a bitter, Nazi-shaped chapter in the lives of Manfred Gruenebaum, 21, and his bride, Bettina, 20, both originally from Cologne, Germany.

But their joy could not shut out what had been.

There was a look of sadness behind the blue eyes of the frail groom. And the bride, lovely in an aqua dress, fought back tears at mention of the past.

"We don't want to speak any more of that," she said after the ceremony, her voice still bearing traces of her German heritage. "We want to forget."

But this much was gleaned from relatives.

Manfred and Bettina, a shapely brunette, met in a concentration camp near Riga in 1941. She was then 14 and he 15.

Their parents had been exterminated by the Nazis. Bettina's brother also was killed.

For four years, through 7 or 8 concentration camps in Lithuania, Germany and Poland, they managed to "stick together."

Manfred said it was sheer luck.

In June, 1946, Manfred came to the United States and lived with his relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Norbert Wolff of 322 Delafield pl. nw. This past May his bride arrived.

The couple will live in Washington, at 402 Delafield pl. nw., following a wedding trip to New York. Rabbi Solomon Metz officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

U. S. to Revive Vetoed Plan For Watch on Greek Border

Lake Success, N. Y., Aug. 3 (U.P.)—The United States will revive its vetoed plan for a Balkan border watch in the United Nations Security Council tomorrow and serve notice to Russia that another veto will not block the Western powers' efforts to check the strife between Greece and her neighbors.

A fresh proposal will be laid before the Council by acting American Delegate Herschel V. Johnson, an official source said, Russia vetoed the original plan five days ago.

The American resolution will be introduced this time under the punitive chapters of the U. N. Charter in support of the formal request by Greece for U. N. enforcement action against Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia, blamed for aiding current strife in Greece.

It was expected to bring another Soviet veto and then another series of maneuvers by the Western powers to keep the Balkans case alive until the 55-nation General Assembly convenes here September 16.

An American official said Johnson would reemphasize America's stake in Greece under the Truman doctrine, but that he would promise to exhaust every avenue of the U. N. before considering any move outside the U. N. This would amount to rejection, for the time being, of a Greek plan to invite countries which favor the Balkans border patrol to set up a commission on the Greek side of the border in defiance of Russia's veto.

Soviet sources said, meanwhile, that Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko was ready to make a foredoomed fight for his plan to clamp U. N. controls on American aid to Greece, to force the withdrawal of all foreign military personnel from Greek territory and to bar any military aid to the Greeks.

An "important" statement on the Soviet plan was likely to be the first order of business when the Council convenes at 3 p. m. tomorrow.

Taft Declares Republicans Must 'Take the Issue'

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 3 (AP).—Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) says Republicans "have got to take the issue with the Democrats" if the GOP is to win the 1948 presidential election.

The Republican Senate leader, en route to his summer home at Murray Bay on the St. Lawrence, stopped in Rochester briefly last night to board a Lake Ontario steamer for Kingston, Ont.

Asked by a reporter to comment on the fact that a speech at Columbus, Ohio, last week had been interpreted as an attempt to bring a statement on international problems from Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Taft replied:

"I can only say that we've got to take the issue with the Democrats if we're to win. We've got to let the people know what the Congress has accomplished and what President Truman is up to."

Freedom of Worship Found in Yugoslavia

Belgrade, Aug. 3 (U.P.)—Seven American ministers, guests of the Yugoslav government to study "religious conditions," agreed today that freedom of worship exists in Yugoslavia.

The group said it realized that it could observe little beyond what the government permitted.

Dr. John Howard Melish, rector of Holy Trinity Church, New York City, said that "it seems to me that the degree of tolerance towards the church here is very high."

Germans Fight With Police Guarding Food

Berlin, Aug. 3 (AP).—Germans pillaging crops fought gun battles with German vigilantes and police assigned to guard the harvest in the American zone, General Lucius D. Clay's semimonthly report to Washington disclosed today.

Seven shooting affrays occurred during the last two weeks of July in Hesse.

In Wuerttemberg-Baden, more than 400 persons overwhelmed a smal. German police force protecting potato harvesters.

With winter approaching, Germans are roving the countryside by bicycle, rattle-trap automobiles and train to lay in a food supply.

The military governor said that more than one slice out of every two of bread eaten by the Germans in the British-American zones during the year ended June 30 came from American farms. It was paid for on a 50-50 basis by American and British taxpayers.

The military governor said production of iron and steel and chemicals, which had been rising since spring, dropped abrupty because of the coal shortage. Steel output dropped about 10 per cent during the month when coal allocations were reduced by 30 per cent.

German-Pole Tie Sought

Berlin, Aug. 3 (U.P.)—The German central administration in the Russian occupation zone and representatives of the Polish government have opened trade negotiations aimed at linking the Soviet zone of Germany and Poland in the eastern Europe economic bloc, reliable sources said today.

A trade agreement between the two parties last April provided for exchange of goods fixed at 28 million dollars. The new negotiations will broaden the list and the volume of goods exchanged.

Power Companies Plan 4 Billion in New Construction

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—Electric light and power companies in the United States spent more than a billion dollars on new construction in 1946 and will continue to expand at the rate of a billion dollars annually for the next four years, Charles O. Oakes, president of Edison Electric Institute, declared today.

New construction will include more generating capacity than is presently installed in all Government-owned power projects, including TVA, Boulder Dam and Bonneville, Oakes said.

Commenting on rumors of an impending widespread electric shortage in the U. S., Oakes said the industry's tremendous construction program would assure adequate power.

New Construction In July Scores 9 Pct. Gain Over Ju

New construction put in place during July scored a more than seasonal gain of almost 9 per cent over June, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

The July value was estimated at $1,139,000,000, against $1,059,000,000 for June and 982 million dollars for July of last year.

Private residential construction also made more than a seasonal gain, advancing 9 per cent over the previous month to a total of 415 million dollars, but privately financed nonresidential building went up less than normally, increasing 1 per cent, to 253 million dollars.

Total public construction in July rose 11 per cent—more than seasonally—to 289 million dollars, including among other things six million dollars for residential construction, 135 million dollars for public highway construction and 36 million dollars for new construction and development construction.

Palestine Jews Threaten to Hang More Britons

Jerusalem, Aug. 3 (AP).—Jewish extremists threatened tonight to hang more British citizens.

A statement issued by the underground said that "we have not yet settled our hanging account with the British."

The statement recalled that Irgun Zvai Leumi threatened to hang a British soldier for every Jew executed by hanging. It denied that booby traps had been attached to the bodies of two British sergeants, hanged Tuesday in Natanya. The statement said a mine placed in the woods nearby, which eyewitnesses said was detonated when the bodies were cut down, was "aimed at soldiers of the enemy."

Meanwhile, one Arab was killed and another seriously wounded in a railway mine explosion near Rehovoth at dawn today, an official announcement said.

Arabs Meet Today

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 3 (AP).—The Arab Higher Executive Committee will meet here tomorrow with Haj Amin el Husseini, exiled Mufti of Jerusalem.

A committee spokesman said a Palestine Arab delegation will be named for the September session of the United Nations General Assembly in New York.

Abd el Krim, Riff warrior who fought the French and Spaniards in 1921-26 and now is in Cairo, told the newspaper Al Balagh that he hoped "the United Nations will succeed in settlement of the Arab cases, but if it fails, a third war is inevitable." He was quoted as saying he lost faith in UN after it did not react to what he described as French aggression in Indochina.

Perfect Landlady Keeps 3 Grown Children Prisoner

Minneapolis, Aug. 3 (U.P.).—A "perfect" landlady who played hymns on the organ and gave tenants two weeks' free rent for Christmas said she shackled and caged her three adult children because it was "the best thing for them," police said today.

Mrs. Bertha Anderson was held on open charges.

Police, acting on a neighbor's suspicion, found Martin Anderson, 42, in a chicken-wire cage upstairs. Clarence Anderson, 38, wa stied to bedsprings, with his hands bound by leather handcuffs, and Violet Anderson, 35, was in an attic room with a sack over her head, police said.

Police said they found life insurance policies totaling $16,000 covering all but one of the children.

Reds Unveil 6 New Types Of Airplanes

Moscow, Aug. 3 (U.P.).—Russia's air force unveiled six new, ultra-modern types of airplanes today, including jet propelled models.

Besides the strictly jet jobs, at the annual air force exhibition day, there was a new Lavochkin fighter plane, the standard engine of which is supplemented by powerful jet booster units.

"The progress the Russian aviation industry has made since the war is, to say the least, startling," an Allied military observer said.

Two Ilyushin models were in the parade of jet planes.

There were three new types of gleaming four-engine transports, shown for the first time.

Most of Russia's big designers were represented in the jet parade, hich showed the emphasis the country is putting on this type of plane.

The six types shown were Yakovlevs, Sukhovs, Mikoyans, Ilyushins, Tupelevs and Lavochkins.

None of the new planes seemed to open up for maximum speed in the review past Premier Josef Stalin and other leaders, and only the Yakovlevs and Hikoyans did aerobatics.

Salisbury Hikes Assessments on 200 Properties

Baltimore, Aug. 3 (AP).—Owners of 200 properties in Salisbury, Md., are receiving in the mail notices of increased assessments, Albert W. Ward, secretary of the State tax commission, announced today.

Ward said the overall increase is 35 per cent and that notices have been mailed to individual property owners. The assessment hikes were made after hearings by the tax commissioners on appeals by the Wicomico County supervisor of assessments.

The 200 properties in the Camden district of Salisbury were reassessed this year for the first time at $1,215,802, 46 per cent higher than their original value.

The county commissioners then lowered the overall assessments to 01,030,105. Arrived at a final valuation of $1,130,339.

Rubber Union Asks End to Wildcat Strike

Detroit, Aug. 3 (U.P.).—In an unprecedented action, the CIO Rubber Workers Union international, clearly worried by the penalty clauses of the Taft-Hartley Law, publicly warned a group of wildcat strikers today to return to work immediately.

A progressive walkout by 450 URW members at the Detroit plant of the U. S. Rubber Company July 24 brought idleness to 7500 workers within two days and a shutdown of the plant.

The Company has maintained during the 11-day strike that it would not negotiate on the dispute over work standards while the strike went on.

Run Ad in Paper

The international, in an advertisement in a Detroit paper, said the strike was unauthorized and in violation of contract. In an obvious reference to the new law, the statement added that the strike "may result in irreparable damage to you as individuals and to your organization."

In another wildcat strike, a series of walkouts that forced suspension of production at the Kaiser-Frazer Corporation's Willow Run plant, the company indicated plainly it had no intention of seeking damages under the Taft-Hartley Law.

Officials of CIO Auto Workers Local 142 presided at a mass meeting of the strikers today and persuaded them to return to work tomorrow.

Flour Mill Strike Ends

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 3 (AP).—A three-week-old strike that all but paralyzed the largest flour milling center in the Nation and threatened a shortage of flour throughout the northeastern United States was ended today.

Stanley J. Bauer, business agent of striking local 21021 of the AFL Flour Mill Workers, said an agreement had been reached with the five struck mills in a surprise conference called by United States Conciliator O. W. Rider.

Bauer said the agreement provided a general 15-cent hourly wage boost, six paid holidays, a 5-cent additional hike for top maintence men and the inclusion of holiday time in computing overtime pay.

The union's 2600 members, who will return to work tomorrow, sought a general 15 per cent increase over the hourly average of $1.14¼.

The walkout began July 14 at the Washburn Crosby Division of General Mills, Inc. and the Buffalo plant of the Pillsbury Flour Mill Co.

It spread 10 days later to the Russell Miller Milling Co., the International Milling Co. and the Standard Milling Co., thus closing all but one of the city's six major mills and cutting production from 10 million to 1 million pounds a day.

Despite Prices

Heavy Steel Demand Due To Continue

Cleveland, Aug. 3 (AP).—Despite recent price boosts in the steel industry, mills probably will continue to face abnormal demands by purchasers several more months this year, the magazine Steel predicted today.

Indications also show that metal-working shops will be unable to purchase all the tonnage they seek, especially with respect to sheets, strip, tubular goods and bars, the publication reported.

"Full impact of the higher steel prices on consuming industry will be impossible to assess for a few weeks," the magazine said. "For that matter, the actual extent of steel increase was not possible of determination even late last week for the reason action had not been taken on some products by all producers.

"With steel consumers facing an estimated increase of $32,000,000 monthly in their steel bills in the closing five months of this year, expectations are manufacturers of durable and capital goods will promptly pass along the higher steel cost to their customers."

The publication said the extent to which manufacturers of goods made of steel would raise their prices was "uncertain," and added that the industry's general rate increase on finished steel products was expected to average about 10 per cent.

The national steelmaking rate held to its high level of 95 per cent of capacity last week, with the greatest increase a seven-point hike to 94 per cent at Cincinnati.

Britain Proves It's Still Nation Of Individualists

London, Aug. 3 (AP).—This is still a nation of individualists.

Nancy Jordan, 21, announced she would ride a horse a la Lady Godiva through the streets of Westgate—dressed "as scantily as possible," she hedged. Men who peek will be fined sixpence (a dime) for hospital charities.

A. W. Mitchell, 84, advertised for a wife 75 years of age or older and got 20 applications in the first mail.

Mrs. Kate Irwin posted a sign in the window of her London antique shop: "Americans Not Served." She wouldn't say why, but friends explained she was "upset about the loan and the political situation."

Magician Jasper Maskelyne got up with being asked if he could do the Indian rope trick, and offered £10,000 ($40,000) to anyone who could prove to him that the trick could be done.

Bobby, canary, credited with singing "God Save the King," died at the age of 15.

Virginia Drama Is Sellout Again

Williamsburg, Va., Aug. 3 (AP).—"The Common Glory" hung out the standing-room-only sign again last night.

More than 150 persons were turned away from the gates of the amphitheater on the banks of Lake Matoaka as scores of others lined the walls and sat on the hillside to see the fifteenth performance of Paul Green's symphonic drama of Old Virginia.

Some 650 cars from 30 States and between 10 and 15 buses brought the capacity crowd to see the play last night, designated by officials as "Portsmouth Night."

Detroit Engineer Wins Metals Society Award

Cleveland, Aug. 3 (AP).—F. P. Zimmerli, a Detroit metallurgical engineer, is the 1947 winner of the American Society for Metals' Albert Sauveur award, it was announced today.

The award is for Zimmerli's pioneering research on the idea, which he conceived about 20 years ago, to use "shot peening to increase favorable stresses in the surfaces of metal parts," said W. H. Eisenman, national secretary.

Shot peening consists of blasting metal surfaces with great numbers of small steel balls at a velocity nearly as high as that of rifle bullets. This hardens the surface and its fatigue life, or durability, is increased.

Restored Man From Tepexpan Is Taller Than Descendants

By the United Press

The 15,000-year-old Tepexpan Man, whose fossil remains are being reassembled at the Smithsonian Institution, has provided a surprise for the anthropologists.

Study this far shows that this gentleman of the Ice Age was taller than his modern-day descendants.

Dr. T. D. Stewart, curator of the Smithsonian's physical anthropology division, said he is believed to have been about 5 feet 8 inches in height—well above the average stature of modern Mexican Indians.

The Tepexpan Man, believed to be the oldest fossil human being ever found in this hemisphere, was dug up from an Ice Age swamp near the village of Tepexpan, near Mexico City, last February.

The remains—parts of a skull, jaw bones, arms, legs and a few other odd skeletal pieces—were flown here late in June. They are being reassembled by Stewart and Dr. Javier Romero of the Mexican National Musuem of Anthropology.

The job is about half finished and Romero expects to return with his charge to Mexico early next month.

So far, the face has been restored, a cast of the brain cavity has been made, and the arm and leg bones are being assembled.

Stewart noted that Americans have been getting taller progressively, and said it was most interesting to note the comparison between the stature of Tepexpan and Mexican Indians of today—where the reverse seems to have occurred.

"This raises the problem whether present-day people really represent a decrease from a higher level," he said.

He pointed out that people of the Middle American countries generally are shorter than those of North and South America. Nutrition is believed to be a factor in this.

Stewart emphasized that no final conclusions can be drawn since only one Tepexpan Man has been found—and he may have towered above his compatriots.

Stewart said the Tepexpan's teeth were also interesting. Although worn down badly, apparently from the coarse food he ate, there are no signs of dental cavities or tooth decay. He was, however, troubled by an abscess, and many of his teeth were missing.

His brain appears to have been "about normal" for the modern Indian, Stewart said, adding that "his intelligence was about the same as far as we can tell."

According to the sutures of the skull, Tepexpan was in his forties when he met death. It is assumed that he met an unhappy end, since his remains were found face down on what was once the edge of a lake.

2 Hurt as Flier Tries for Landing On Father's Farm

Two persons were seriously injured in a plane crash yesterday when the pilot apparently attempted to land in a field on his father's farm, 4 miles east of Frederick, Md., near Route 40.

Injured were James Kent, 24, a former Army flier, and his passenger, Mary C. Willis, 20, of New Market, Md.

They were taken to Frederick Memorial Hospital. Hospital attendants last night said Kent's condition was critical and Miss Willis' condition serious.

State Trooper Richard Myers said a witness told him that Kent's plane was flying lown toward Carrol M. Kent's farmhouse when a wheel hit a power line and the plane nosed into the ground.

Officials at the Stevens airport, near Lewiston, Md., from whom Kent had rented the plane, said it was destroyed and placed its value at $2500.

Today's program includes a tour of the campus, committee meetings, assembly in the armory, a campfire, moving pictures and vespers.

French Erect R. R. Station For Boy Scouts

Paris, Aug. 3.—For 35,000 teenage boys, the French state railways have just completed a 15-track station and endowed it with a chef de gare in traditional white cap, tickets and trains.

The new station is Rosny-Jamboree, northwest of Paris, where the first postwar international gathering of Boy Scouts will open August 9. Hundreds, from as far away as Indo-China, have already arrived.

Following their arrival in Antwerp yesterday, the tents of the 1100-strong American contingent are to appear on the 1000-acre jamboree site within the next few days. The Americans will tour Holland and Belgium before coming to France.

With 30 nations to be represented, the French press has given Rosny-Jamboree the nickkname of "babel city."

A number of Washington area scouts are attending the jamboree.

EGYPT LOOKS TO THE UNITED NATIONS .....FOR JUSTICE

The dispute between Egypt and the United Kingdom is now before the Security Council of the United Nations.

Up to this time, the Security Council has dealt only with difficulties arising out of the aftermath of the War. Now before it is a dispute which is rooted in the darkness of nineteenth-century British Imperialism.

The world has traveled a rough and rocky road, but it has come a long way since rapacity ran wild in the nineteenth century. It has achieved a new conscience.

Universal Principles Involved

At stake in Egypt's dispute with Britain are those very principles for which the Allies fought and won in the struggle against Nazism and Fascism.

What are those principles? A place in the twentieth-century world for all peace-loving peoples; sovereign equality among nations large and small; the right of every nation to be free from the dominance of others, to live its life unfettered by Imperialistic design or ambition.

Buoyed by the hopes inspired by the Atlantic Charter, Egypt did her utmost in the War to assist the Allies. Eagerly and enthusiastically she joined with them in founding the United Nations.

With that great prospect before her, Egypt now tries to put her own house in order. She wants to evict her uninvited guest—Britain.

Five thousand years ago, Egypt lit the torch of civilization for the world. The crowded centuries since have taught her many lessons in patience and understanding. At the present turning-point of history, she wants to take her part as an equal in the reconstruction of world society. To do so, she cannot be content with what Lord Cromer called a "bastard freedom." She must have her complete liberty and independence.

Egypt confidently seeks the aid of the Security Council in establishing conditions in which Peace may reign in the Valley of the Nile.

The Cauldron of the Middle East

The significance of the Middle East in international affairs has now dawned on world opinion, in the West as in the East. Peace in Europe, as well as Peace in Asia, depends on this vital link between the two.

Egypt is the meeting place of three continents—Africa, Asia and Europe. She holds a central position in the policy of the whole Middle East. Both as a Member of the United Nations and as a Member of the Arab League—a regional arrangement sanctioned by the Charter of the United Nations—Egypt has a great role to play. To play it, she must be free in fact as well as in law.

The continent of Africa has ceased to be the hunting ground of exploiting Imperialists. Order has yet to be established there, however, and the independent States of Africa—of which Egypt is the oldest—must be freed from the chains forged by Imperialism before our present international conscience had been developed.

"Temporary" Occupation of Egypt

For sixty-five years, foreign troops have been encamped on Egyptian soil. It is not a long span as Egypt gauges history, yet it measures the precise period in which the world has changed its whole moral outlook.

The British occupation of Egypt dates from 1882.

It began as a merely "temporary" measure. The most solemn assurances were given in the British Parliament—not only to the Egyptian people, but also to the Powers of Europe—that it would soon be ended. Yet two generations have come and gone, sixty-five years have been torn off the calendar—and British bayonets still glisten in the Egyptian sunlight.

A feint of evacuation was recently made, to palliate aroused Egyptian feelings. The lines of encampment were moved back a few miles. The British forces quit Alexandria and Cairo only to take up new stations within an hour's motor journey of Egypt's capital. No forces were withdrawn from that part of Egyptian territory called the Sudan.

During recent negotiations, the British pledged themselves to complete evacuation of Egypt proper by 1949. This pledge was conditional, however. The conditions involved concessions by Egypt as to matters essential to her national policy. Of course Egypt declined to barter on that basis. She demands complete unconditional evacuation.

The Invader's Flimsy Pretexts

The policy of an aggrandizing State has been one constant feature: the constant variance of its justification. Each shift in the international scene brings a change of its basis. Reasons assigned at one time contradict those given at another time. And however good the reasons may be, the real reasons are always something else.

None of the pretexts on which the British have explained their invasion of Egypt had validity at the time, and events since have sapped them of even the appearance of reality.

Britain first intervened in Egypt on high moral grounds—as the morality of the time then was. She acted in the interests of foreign bondholders! Egypt's commitments were called fantastic; her debt was said to be colossal. Yet the amount was but a few million pounds—a figure at which in our time the poorest bankrupt nation would hardly bat an eye!

Today, Egypt has become a creditor country. She has a credit balance in London of £450,000,000, or approximately $1,800,000,000. One can speak no longer of protecting the foreign creditors of Egypt.

Then there was the pretext of defending Egypt and the Suez Canal. This, although Egypt has defended herself for generations, and a multilateral international treaty of 1888 confides to Egypt primarily the responsibility of defending the Canal.

It is somewhat an irony of fate that the British, who fought so bitterly the original deLesseps plan for the canal, opposed its conception and construction, and subsequently put obstacles in the way of its completion, should now emerge as the sole protector and guardian of the Canal.

And we must not forget that the entire Suez Canal is part and parcel of the domain of Egypt. Even the concession under which it is operated reverts in toto to Egypt in November, 1969.

Britain's "defense of Egypt" made the country a pawn of European Power politics.

The second World War has demonstrated the inadequacy of any British garrison for the defense of the Suez Canal. Even with Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus, Alexandria and Port Said held by British troops, shipping had to be diverted around the Cape of Good Hope, and the Canal was all but idle.

Egypt is under no illusion on this score. In an era of guided missiles, of long-range aviation, of the atomic bomb, the protection of the Canal by a permanent garrison of several thousands of soldiers is a dream. Egypt will relate her own efforts to collective security under the United Nations.

"One Hour of Justice Is Worth 100 Hours of Prayer."—Egyptian proverb.

In more recent years, the theme-song of British policy has been the protection of international communications. "International" has become a common British synonym for "Imperial". Again this is not Britain's responsibility. Other European States, too, have possessions to be reached through the Canal, and non-European States have an interest in the short route between West and East.

The Suez Canal was not built by the British. Under French direction it was built by Egyptian manpower, chiefly at Egypt's expense. Britain, as has been pointed out, did everything possible to prevent its construction.

The traffic, the neutrality, and the defense of the Canal are regulated by a great instrument of public international law. Egypt will discharge her responsibility to guard this great artery of international communication, and in doing so she will seek the cooperation of all States through the United Nations.

All of the pretexts employed for justifying British policy are specious. Behind them is always the goal of British Imperialism, the desire to keep Britain's grip on the Valley of the Nile.

Whatever the British pretext, whatever the ultimate aim of British policy, it has no relation to what the British have done in Egypt.

The Invader's Iron Heel

For many years, British officials in Egypt acted as if they owned the country. They made themselves a privileged class apart. They interfered in purely domestic affairs whenever they saw fit. They brought pressure to bear at administrative levels high and low. At London's whim, an Egyptian Prime Minister, even a Khedive, could be deposed, any Egyptian law could be revoked, any foreign idea could be imported. For in the background, always stood British tanks and British Tommies.

Can one find it strange that all of this was a constant irritation to the Egyptian people? Is it to be wondered at that resentment waxed warmer and warmer during each of the sixty-five years? That the stimulus to social reform was deadened? That economic and political progress was impeded?

In 1922, when Egyptian opinion was boiling over, the British declared their imposed protectorate at an end. Yet the strings attached, and the continuance of the occupation, still held Egypt in the British vise!

The British Divide to Rule

Not content with their unbridled intervention, the British have isolated the southern part of the Nile Valley. They have established their own direct rule in the Sudan. They have thus sought to dismember the national territory of Egypt.

The Unity of the Nile Valley is a cardinal tenet of Egpytian outlook. The conception has not been invented to serve a political purpose. It is imposed upon us by nature and by history.

The people of the Nile Valley—Egyptians of the North and Egyptians of the South alike—depend for their very existence on the Nile. Its waters quench their thirst, grow their crops, generate their power. Without its bounty, all of Egypt would be a parched and barren desert.

The Nile welds Egypt in the North and the Sudan in the South into one. No natural frontiers divide one section from the other. The present boundary between Egypt and the Sudan—"made in Britain"—is entirely artificial. It is merely imiginary. Nature bestowed on it not even a semblance of a sanction.

The population of the Valley of the Nile forms a single community. A majority of the people are of the same racial stock. They have common traditions, a common culture, and a common religion. Arabic is their common language.

From time immemorial, Egypt and the Sudan have been united. From the centuries of the Pharaohs, throughout the Graeco-Roman era, during all the years of Arab and Turkish ascendancy, the bonds were kept intact. In the nineteenth century, Mohammed Aly the Great cemented the union in a single political organization. Not until the British invasion was any serious challenge offered to the Unity of the Nile.

Britain's Gaze Turns South

When the British arrived in 1882, Egyptian troops were engaged in quelling a local religious rebellion in the Sudan, led by the Mahdi. The British forced their withdrawal. Some years later Kitchener led an Egyptian army, assisted by a small British force, which put down the revolt, and raised the Egyptian and British flags.

At this time, however, the French had designs on the Sudan. In the famous Fashoda incident, the French commander refused to yield to any claim by Britain, but he consented to withdraw in favor of Egypt.

In England, British statesmen were at pains to explain the incident as Egypt's triumph. Lord Salisbury declared that "The right of the Egyptian Government in the Nile Valley is indisputable, since the Egyptian victory over the Mahdists." Lord Rosebery asserted, "We are only returning to Egypt a territory considered as Egyptian and recognized as such by successive French Governments." Joseph Chamberlain said, "We demand in the name of Egypt to establish her sovereignty on all territories which were hers."

For Egyptian ears, however, another tune was played. Britain sang of "the claims which have accrued to Her Britannic Majesty's Government by right of conquest." On this high ground, she demanded a share in the control of the Sudan.

Thus came about what for a time the British were content to label a "joint administration." But after a short while no bend was left in the joint. For twenty years past, "joint" has meant exclusively British. No wonder that Lord Cromer called the Administration "the child of opportunism."

Attempt to Cut Egypt in Two

Not only have Egyptians ceased to have any appreciable share in the Sudan Administration. Except with greatest difficulty, they cannot even enter the region, and the Egyptian Government has no direct way of informing itself what the British do there.

Despite the continuance of Egyptian sovereignty in the Sudan, Britain sets up a claim, allegedly on behalf of the Sudanese, of right to secede from Egypt.

The Sudan Administration has no democratic basis. All power is vested in the British Governor General. The flare of drums announces the entry of the Governor General into even his own dining hall. Martial law has never ceased to prevail. Yet Britain arrogates to helfself a right to speak on behalf of the Sudanese people.

The latest British tactic is the sponsorship of a puppet movement for independence of the Sudan. For this purpose they encounter no difficulty in finding acceptable stooges. Yet the vast majority of the Sudanese cry aloud for unity with Egypt under a common Crown.

Of course the British hold out the bait of independence of the Sudan—that is, ultimate independence. How ultimate is for the British to decide! And as elsewhere in their far-flung Empire, the people are never "ready" for independence.

An Essentially Domestic Matter

The Egyptians of the North and the Egyptians of the Sudan are perfectly capable of solving their essentially domestic matters by themselves. They do not need an invader's assistance. United by so many ties, they do not want an alien voice in their counsels.

Egypt has no desire to exploit any section of the Nile Valley. Every section can govern itself under the central administration. If the Sudanese need any assistance in achieving a special kind of self-government, Britain is not qualified to give it.

Fifty years of almost exclusive British administration have failed to help the Sudanese along the path of modern progress. Education has been neglected, and illiteracy is as high as 95%. Industry is non-existent. Agriculture is backward. The Sudan requires capital and the services of experts, neither of which has been supplied by Britain.

Egypt and the Sudan are partners in a great enterprise. They have the same interest in the harnessing of the Nile, and in the utilization of its waters. The storage which must be effected in the flood season necessitates elaborate works. A vast series of dams and reservoirs must be built and maintained, many of them in the upper regions of the River. Enormous expenditures are required, and the larger part of them must be sustained by Egypt. The benefits will accrue to the Sudan and to Egypt alike.

Peace in the Valley of the Nile

The complete evacuation of British troops, and the ending of the British imperialistic venture in the Sudan, will open up a prospect for Peace in the Valley of the Nile. Peace after two generations of turmoil! And with it, unity and prosperity.

A contented people in this strategic area of the Middle East will want to make their contribution to a world of United Nations. An Egypt once more united will take its place in world society—not as a tail to anyone's Imperial kite, but as an equal.

Egypt asks to be permitted to live in the world of the Charter.

Egypt looks to the United Nations for Justice.

Church Group Urged to Be More Mature

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 3 (AP).—The third world convention of the Churches of Christ opened today with a plea for maturity from its president, George H. Stewart, of Winnipeg, Manitoba.

"If we are to be a people who effectively serve our Lord and Master, we must grow up. We must mature," the ailing Canadian churchman said in a message read by his son, Hayden Stewart, of Cornwallis, Oreg.

Stewart proposed four tasks to be undertaken by "mature Christians."

He said they must "mature sufficiently" to achieve Christian unity; to solve the problem of "man's relation to man" in industry, to insure the "building of a lasting peace," and to increase the effectiveness of the church's ecumenical movement.

Earlier, a united communion service was held in the Churches of Christ and the international convention of the Disciples of Christ, which ended its general session yesterday.

Religious Freedom Urged

Copenhagen, Denmark, Aug. 3 (AP).—The Seventh Congress of the World Baptist Alliance issued a manifesto on religious freedom tonight at the closing session of the international meeting in which the delegates promised "active support of the United Nations."

The manifesto demanded a maintenance of religious freedom parallel with political and economic freedom and appealed to the Baptists of the world to "join hands with everyone in fighting for freedom in order to create a new world, free of fear, free of want and free of all kinds of slavery."

The Alliance announced the next world congress would be held in 1950, instead of 1952 as originally planned. The meeting place was not determined. The youth committee announced the Baptist Youth World Congress would be held in 1949 "somewhere in Europe."

New Martin 202 Halves Air Time

Baltimore, Aug. 3 (AP).—Glenn L. Martin's new commercial airliner 202 returned to Baltimore today after covering 16,000 miles in 69 hours of flying time on the first accelerated test for the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

The twin-engined, 40-passenger plane made 34 landings in 17 states during the week-long test. Martin officials said the plane generally halved flying time for two-engined commercial planes between various cities. O. E. Tibbs, Martin flight director, said the 202 equalled or bettered the scheduled flying times of four-engined airliners.

Paraguayan Rebels Claimed Near Capitol

Posadas, Argentina, Aug. 3 (AP).—A Paraguayan rebel radio broadcast heard here today claimed the rebel army was advancing toward Asuncion, the capital, and had occupied the small town of Rosario, less than 60 miles north of the government's stronghold.

The official report from Asuncion said the government was now "carrying out cleaning up operations near the Capital," which tended to confirm the rebel claim that they were marching to the South against Asuncion.

$252,450 Contributed For National Shrine

A total of $252,450 has been contributed toward completion of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University, the Right Rev. John J. Reilly, shrine director, revealed yesterday.

9 report from the Most Rev. John F. Noll, bishop of Fort Wayne and funds campaign chairman, showed archdiocesean contributions as high as $50,000, Msgr. Reilly said. Many dioceses have yet to make reports, he said.

Army Plans To Keep Plants Ready for War

By The Associated Press

The War Department expects to keep 60 complete Government owned industrial plants, worth $2,301,348,000, in readiness for specialized production should another war threaten this country, it was disclosed yesterday.

Maintaining the plants in readiness is part of the Army's plan for industrial mobilization, Secretary of War Royall said in a report covering the period July 1, 1945, to June 30, 1947.

The report also brought out that in a study of passive defense measures the War Department has authorized the Chief of Engineers to spend $150,000 this year to develop construction of underground manufacturing facilities and determine how safe they would be from atomic attack.

The department has likewise approved expenditure of $250,000 to determine ways in which a "chemical processing plant (currently operating above ground)" and an ordnance department fire-control instrument plant can be moved underground.

Plan to Go Underground

Royall said the Army Air Forces have been studying problems relating to maunfacture of critical aircraft components in underground installations. As a result of these studies, he reported, it is planned to obtain funds during 1948 to enable the Chief of Engineers to construct a pilot plant underground.

The report was compiled under Royall's direction while he was Undersecretary of War, for submission to Robert Patterson, whom he succeeds as Secretary of War.

Royall commented that "twice within a generation, American industry has demonstrated that, given adequate time to convert to munitions production, it can outproduce any other nation in the world."

He added, however, that the rapid advances of science make it unlikely that "time will again be on our side."

"The ultimate objective of the plans is to have in stock, or to provide by prompt production in our arsenals and standby plants, sufficient material to resist an aggressor during the first stage."

Cost Set At 25 Million

Cost of maintaining the 60 plants is estimated at $25,122,000 annually, if none is leased for civilian use meanwhile.

With the maximum possible number of plants leased out, the department estimates it could save $10,834,000 annually.

In addition to the standby plants, the War Department has requested legislation to authorize the War Assets Administration to sell or lease 71 other industrial plants, costing $1,400,000,000, earmarked so as to be taken over by the Secretary of War on 120 days notice, if necessary.

Furthermore, the Department has authorized, pending adequate legislation, an industrial equipment reserve consisting of 776,393 machine tools and productive equipment, costing 350 million dollars, earmarked for the Army Air Forces and technical services.

The Royall report relates that through the Army and Navy Munitions Board, the War Department is participating in the stockpiling program which contemplates the purchase and storage of $2,500,000,000 worth of scarce strategic materials.

81 Students Are Graduated By County Police School

Eighty-one town and county policemen were graduated Saturday night from the Montgomery County Police School at exercises held in Kensington Junior High School.

The course began July 7 and included talks on law enforcement and legal subjects by judges of the Circuit Court, other county officials and FBI agents. Capt. James S. McAuliffe, commanding the Bethesda substation, was in charge of the school.

Certificates were presented by Capt. Joseph B. Nolte, commanding the Silver Spring substation, and Capt. Roy Bodmer, commanding headquarters station at Rockville, who then awarded certificates to each other.

Those awarded certificates were:

Capt. Joseph B. Nolte, Capt. Roy Bodmer, Lieut. Jerry Hobbs, Lieut. Earl Thomas, Sergts. Charles Peter, Alton G. Harding, William T. DeNeil, Paul Watkins, Leo C. Day and Ralph Howard; Corpls. Fort Dupont Park to Get Golf Course

Construction of a nine-hole, public golf course at Fort Dupont Park has been started and will probably be completed by the end of September.

The course may not be open for play until spring, however, depending on weather conditions, Harry T. Thompson, assistant superintendent, National Capital Parks, said yesterday.

The entire cost of construction, about $57,000, is being provided by past profits of other golf courses, he said.

The course is being constructed in the vicinity of Minnesota ave. and Ely street in the lower end of the park. Present plans do not include any buildings.

Fireplaces and other picnic facilities are to be installed in land loaned to the District for the past 20 years in the upper section of the park, Thomson said. Buildings there, including a house occupied by Clifford Lanham, former superintendent of the District Division of Trees and Parking, have been removed.

Development of the park, which surrounds the site of a Civil War fort, has been under way since 1934.

Bilbo Fire Missing As Mississippi Faces Primary

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 2 (INS).—Mississippi's five-man gubernatorial campaign was ready tonight for submission to the State's million white citizens, approximately 332,000 of whom are expected to cast ballots in Tuesday's Democratic primary.

The campaign, which carried aspirants to practically every crossroad in the State, lacked the hot-tempered debates of Mississippi campaigns of the past.

One reason for the listlessness prevailing could be ascribed to the illness of the fiery unseated senior Senator, Theodore G. Bilbo. Another factor promoting peace and quiet was the complete absence of a racial issue.

Both U. S. and States Expected to Continue Income Taxes

By The Associated Press

The Treasury Department said last night that it might as well be assumed that both the Federal Government and the States are going to keep right on imposing income taxes.

It took this view with the realistic argument that both get much of their revenue from this source.

In stepping into the politically warming discussion of Federal-State tax relations, the Treasury ignored a suggestion by Republican presidential possibility Thomas E. Dewey for dividing up the tax fields.

The Treasury said that conflicts between State and Federal income taxes are "not as broad as appears at first sight." It also said that there is much to be said for the idea of having a joint Federal-State income tax return and single administration of collection—with the Federal and State governments sharing the revenue.

Nowhere in a 60-page study it produced on Federal-State tax relations did the Treasury take any notice of Governor Dewey's remarks at the Governors' conference last month recommending that:

The States completely surrender their income-taxing authority to the Federal Government in exchange for sole power to impose certain excise taxes, such as cigarette and gasoline levies, which both the Federal and State governments now collect.

But the Treasury had its own say on tobacco and gasoline taxing, alog with a lot of other subjects, an dit boiled down to this:

1. "The administration of State tobacco taxes is more difficult and costly than Federal Administration" because the Federal tax is collected from the relatively few manufacurers while the States have to collect from wholesalers, retailers and even retail consumers.

Tobacco Tax Problem

Besides, the problem in the tobacco tax field "is not so much one of overlapping Federal-State taxation as the inability of the States to efficiently administer their own taxes with respect to interstate shipments."

2. As to gasoline taxation, "the consequences of dual taxation are perhaps less serious than in almost any other in the realm of Federal-State duplication."

Yet, the Treasury concedes, "it may be well to explore the possibility of Federal withdrawal from motor fuel taxation in exchange for State withdrawal from another area." It did not specify what area, but added:

"If timed to coincide with the over-all revision of the Federal excise structure anticipated for the near future such arrangement might make a significant contribution to postwar revenue revision."

One table in the report, summarizing Federal-State tax overlapping showed that of 39 billion dollars in Federal and $4,900,000,000 State collections during fiscal 1946. More than 90 per cent came from taxies levied by both on the same things.

These were income, death and gift, liquor, tobacco, gasoline, admissions and stock-transfer taxes.

Sumatra Train Wreck Toll Now Set at 400

Medan, Sumatra, Aug. 3 (AP).—Dutch sources estimated today that at least 400 Indonesians were killed in a train wreck which occurred last week when passengers, terror-strickened by the Dutch drive in northern Sumatra, ordered the train to proceed without a signal. Their train ran into another traveling in the opposite direction.

The right of way near Pematangsiantar remained littered with 20 twisted coaches. The dead passengers as yet have not been buried.

6000 Women Call For Costa Rica Vote

San Jose, Costa Rica, Aug. 3 (AP). Six thousand women, waving flags and singing the national anthem, demonstrated in front of the presidental palace today demanding equal electoral rights for all Costa Ricans.

President Teodoro Picado promised a settlement of the issue soon. But the women were unsatisfied and declared they intended to remain in the park in front of the [illegible] until they got a better answer.

The government opposition sponsored a work stoppage two weeks ago demanding what it called "free and impartial" elections.

UAW-CIO FORCES TEST OF LAW-EVASION SCHEME

Strike Raises Question:

"Shall Labor Unions Be Above the Law?"

Union Officials in Open Defiance

There is a strike at the Murray-Detroit plants that may shut down a large part of the automobile industry.

There is only one issue in dispute—

The high command of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) has demanded that the following paragraph be included in the contract now being negotiated between its Local 2, Detroit, and the Murray Corporation:

"It is understood and agreed that, in the event of any alleged violation of this contract, there shall be no liability on the part of the International Union, Local Union or any of their officers, agents or members, and the sole recourse and exclusive remedies of the employer in such event shall be those which are specifically provided for in this agreement."

The Company is unwilling to accept the provisions of this paragraph forced on the Union Local by officers of their International.

To compel the inclusion of this law-evading provision, the Union has put more than 7,000 workers employed at Murray-Detroit plants out of work—just as their local bargaining committee had practically reached agreement with the Company on all other points, including wage increases in line with the pattern established for the automotive industry.

The Company believes that when two parties make a contract, both should be responsible for carrying it out. The Union officers want the Company to be responsible and the Union not responsible.

Of what value is a contract when one party is bound and the other is free to break it at will?

The Taft-Hartley Act makes both parties responsible. The Union's demand would destroy the effectiveness of the Act.

This Act was passed in conformance with public demand for the elimination of irresponsible strikes that shut down production and prolong shortages of things people need.

The Murray Corporation regards the proposal of the International Union as no less than open defiance of a law of the United States and of the will of the American people.

Norway Honors King Haakon On Monarch's 75th Birthday

Oslo, Norway, Aug. 3 (AP).—King Haakon was hailed on his seventy-fifth birthday today as "the most popularly beloved" monarch Norway ever had, and was presented with the country's highest decoration, the Medal for Civil Merit, at a special cabinet council.

Haakon

The King, who has reigned since 1905, wore the new decoration on a triumphal two-hour tour of Oslo during which he was cheered by hundreds of thousands.

The official program of King's birthday observance ended when he addressed a huge throng in front of the capital's City Hall.

But the celebration continued with a festival and open air dancing throughout the bright summer night, while Haakon was feted by his family and a few personal friends at the palace.

The King's birthday gift from the Norwegian people was a British-built motor yacht of 1632 tons, the Philante, built in 1937 for Thomas Sopwith, British multi-millionaire, and purchased by popular subscription.

SS Officer Describes Rescue Of Mussolini From Captors

Dachau, Germany, Aug. 3 (AP).—A romantic Italian merchant who thought he was only playing Cupid helped Adolf Hitler rescue Benito Mussolini, according to a story told here today—three years after the death of the Duce.

The story came from SS Colonel Otto Skorzeny, giant paratrooper who wrote a 42-page account of his abduction of Mussolini on Hitler's orders.

Meeting the press in advance of his trial on charges of violating the laws of war, Skorzeny also denied he ever tried to kidnap Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. But he said he snatched Hungary's Admiral Nicholas Horthy from the advancing Russians.

Skorzeny's rescue of Mussolini was ordered by Hitler in the spring of 1943 after the Italians installed Marshal Badoglio as head of the state.

Scoured Italy for Months

"He (Hitler) informed me," said Skorzeny, "that Mussolini was not only an ally but also his one and only great friend, 'the last of the ancient Romans of the Caesarian tradition.'"

Skorzeny scoured Italy for four months. In September he heard Mussolini might be held in the Appenines near San Grasso. He spoke to an Italian merchant:

"I invented a girl friend from Rome who had fled in fear of Allied bomb attacks and begged him to help me send her a love letter. The Italian informed me that the valley was entirely cordoned off."

The man, still anxious to try to deliver the "love letter," reported to Skorzeny later a rumor that all the secrecy had something to do with Mussolini.

Skorzeny prepared 12 gliders, each with nine men, and took off for the 6000-foot aerie. The first two crashed almost as soon as they took off.

Skorzeny landed 50 feet from the hotel. The Italian guards were too surprised to act.

"I reported to Mussolini: 'Duce, the Fuehrer has sent me as a token of his loyal friendship.' Mussolini embraced me and assured that he had daily expected his extradition to the Allies but that he would have put an end to his life beforehand."

Shorzeny took off from an improvised field in a Storch plane, built for one or two passengers.

"We almost reached the brink of a cliff when a ditch suddenly cut straight across our path. We hopped over the ditch and coasted over the brink. After a drop of perhaps 1000 feet the pilot succeeded in gaining control. The plane flew over the valley just above the ground."

In Patica de Mare, they transferred to Luftwaffe transports and flew to Hitler's headquarters.

Farmers Repay Loans for Land More Slowly Now

Farmers are paying off their Government loans with which they financed farm purchases more slowly than a year ago, the report of the Farm Credit Administration showed yesterday.

Repayments averaged $1.62 for each dollar loaned during the year. In 1946 repayments averaged $1.81 for each dollar loaned, and $3.11 in 1945.

During the year 32,193 loans were made for a total of $150,056,051. The higher prices of land were reflected in the fact that loans averaged 11.3 per cent larger than in 1946.

Miami Woman Turns Self Into Human Torch

Miami, Fla., Aug. 3 (AP).—Mrs. Marie Batista, 27, died in a hospital today 5½ hours after, Homicide Detective Thomas R. Lipe reported, she covered her body with a paint thinner and made herself a human torch.

Lipe said that Mrs. Batista's husband, Louis, heard her screams and rushed to the porch of their home, where he found her in flames.

The detective said his investigation showed that Mrs. Batista had applied a pitcher of paint thinner to her body with a brush, then set it afire.

Batista, a chef, said his wife had been emotionally upset for some time.

Ford Overture

The executive board of the United Automobile Workers has sanctioned a strike of Ford employes beginning this week. Failure to reach an agreement on details of a proposed retirement plan is given as one of the reasons for striking. But the major cause of dispute apparently grows out of the Ford Motor Co.'s refusal to insert a clause in its contract with the union that would exempt the latter from suits for damages growing out of illegal strikes. In rejecting a proposal that would in effect nullify provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act designed to discourage wildcat strikes and unfair labor practices, the company said: "We respect and obey the laws of the land and cannot be party to placing unions above the law." The company also warns the union that a strike to compel compliance with a demand of this kind would be a strike "against the Government and laws of the land." Unions that try to escape the penalties of illegal action by resort to such tactics and employers who acquiesce in such attempts at evasion are following a very short-sighted policy that, if persisted in, will invite more stringent prohibitions than those contained in the new labor act.

Labor unions can be afforded adequate protection against suits for damages that might unjustly penalize them without relying upon escape clauses in contracts that would destroy needed safeguards against illegal and antisocial activities. The Ford company has suggested a plan that would give the UAW the required protection without laying either the company or the union open to charges of law evasion. It has agreed not to institute suits for damages arising out of illegal strikes, if those strikes are not inspired or authorized by the union, if the union publicly denounces such strikes, and if its responsible officers and agents act promptly to prevent or end them. It would then be left to the decision of an impartial umpire to determine whether the union had acted in good faith to suppress illegal strikes.

In our opinion, this proposal is eminently reasonable. For it would allay fears that the union might possibly be penalized for the acts of irresponsible members over whom it had no control, without interfering with the objectives of the Taft-Hartley Act to hold unions accountable for the illegal acts of their agents. However, if the UAW has rejected this reasonable proposal and Ford employes are preparing to strike to enforce their extreme demands, the Ford company is justified in concluding that it "has been chosen as the guinea pig in an effort by the UAW-CIO to veto those parts of a Federal statute which it does not happen to like." We share the opinion of the Ford management that "it is things like this which cause people to lose confidence in labor leadership."

Spiraling Prices

Another wage-price spiral threatens as a result of the agreement negotiated with John L. Lewis. Without waiting to determine by actual experience the cost of that settlement to the industry, coal prices were promptly raised. Now the steel industry has followed with price boosts bearing no relation to the possible additions to production costs attributable to higher coal prices. Indeed, Irving S. Olds, chairman of United States Steel, explains that the announced increases in the company's prices do not cover any of the recent increases in coal prices. Moreover, the general advances in steel prices are asserted to be only a partial offset to April 1 increases in steel pay, mounting costs of steel scrap, higher freight charges, and increased outlays for fuel oil, other materials and equipment. Hence there is a possibility that the steel industry may before many months have passed be posting a new scale of prices to compensate for the higher cost of coal and other items.

Meantime, the added cost of steel will give another upward push to prices of products of steel-consuming industries. General Motors has already boosted its prices by amounts far in excess of the additional cost of the steel used in making automobiles, and the rest of the auto industry will doubtless follow its lead. These increases, it should be noted, come at a time when the steel industry is booming and profits are at high level, even though second quarter earnings of United States Steel were well below first quarter returns. G. M. earnings for the first six months of the year have likewise been the highest in a decade except during the war period.

No doubt the effect of past cost increases have not yet been fully reflected in the earnings, and the temptation is great to arrest an anticipated down trend of profits by immediate price boosts. At present high levels of demand for steel and automobiles, prices can, of course, be raised for the time being without fear of discouraging buying and curtailing the volume of output. However, industrialists who take advantage of the existence of a seller's market to shift to consumers past or expected cost increases by sharply raising prices of basic products are taking some serious long-time risks. For, as the President pointed out in his recent Economic Report, "Price boosts now in pivotal areas of the industrial field, based on uncertain estimates of expected cost increases, or without full consideration of whether profit margins permit absorption, can only add to inflationary forces." And he added: "Another general surge of price inflation would have only one result, the sharp recession which it is to everyone's interest to prevent." The recently announced coal, steel and automobile price increases in disregard of this salutary warning disappoint hopes that the country's business leaders were prepared to follow restrained pricing policies that would help to stabilize the economy and lay the foundation for sustained prosperity.

Hughes And Cries

As the senatorial inquisition into the strangely interconnected business and social activities of Mr. Howard Hughes goes into a second week, we have the distinct impression that if anything of great value is learned from it, it will be quite apart from the main intention of those who have promoted and are conducting the inquiry. Everything indicates that the whole affair was conceived as a kind of burlesque curtain-raiser to next year's campaign. From this viewpoint, of course, the timing was masterful; the story broke at a moment when the most conscientious of newspaper readers had had his surfeit of Russian obstructionisms, of British economic difficulties, of the problem of displaced persons, of Colonel Peron and Signor Toledano, of the unending troubles in Greece, India, Indonesia and Palestine. In a world inoculated to horror, even the occasional hachet murders seemed tame and trivial, and the possibilities afforded by the pleasant diversion of the flying saucers had been pretty well exhausted.

Thus the investigation was assured in advance of maximum attention and space, especially as it was introduced to editors and readers with the revelation that various actresses and models had been summoned to appear. This guaranteed that the story would have ample illustration, though there is no reason to suppose that the testimony of these beautiful witnesses will have the slightest relevance or value. Indeed, in point of publicity Mr. Hughes has already been repaid a hundred or a thousand fold for the grandiose expense accounts of the hospitable Mr. Johnny Meyer.

Meanwhile, the suspicion has grown that private as well as political motives may be involved in the investigation, that it may be among other things a tactical operation in a great contest of millionaires for control of American overseas airlines operations. Since this would be something slightly more sinister than another political circus, we are glad to read that Senator Brewster, who has been accused of being the favored instrument of Mr. Juan Trippe and the Pan American Airways interests, has promised to waive his congressional immunity, and as an evidence of good faith, to permit this alleged relationship to be investigated by his colleagues of the committee.

Mr. Meyer's revelation that he spent within two years something over $5000 of Mr. Hughes' money entertaining Elliott Roosevelt in various swank spots in Hollywood, New York and elsewhere, and that this included gifts of money to Miss Faye Emerson (now the third Mrs. Roosevelt) is interesting and perhaps important. That General Roosevelt accepted so many champagne dinners and other Sybaritic luxuries, without apparent misgiving or qualm, in no way surprises us, for he has repeatedly shown himself a man singularly lacking in discretion and sensibility. It remains, however, for the committee to prove that there was some connection between Mr. Meyer's hospitality and the character of General Roosevelt's report to the Army Air Forces recommending that Mr. Hughes be awarded a contract for his photo-reconnaissance plane. General Roosevelt was a flier experienced in photo-reconnaissance operations; and his obvious social and political ineptitudes are not prima facie proof that his technical abilities do not extend somewhat beyond the mixing of old-fashioned cocktails.

After all, as Mr. Meyer pointed out to the committee, the entertainment of military and political big shots is merely standard practice among airplane manufacturers hunting for contracts. Presumably, then, another manufacturer would have been only too glad to have picked up as many checks for General Roosevelt as Mr. Meyer did. But, then, of course, not all manufacturers are as advantageously placed as is Mr. Hughes in the matter of Hollywood connections.

Conscience Cases

Of the 16,000 persons sent to prison during and after the war for violation of the Selective Service law, all but about 800 are now at liberty. Many of those released from prison are at liberty, however, only on parole; and nearly all have suffered a loss of civil rights that severely handicaps them in the pursuit of a career. In most States they may not hold public office or be licensed for certain occupations. The full privileges of American citizenship can be restored to them only if the President grants them amnesty for the crime of which they were found guilty.

Last February the President appointed a board under the chairmanship of former Supreme Court Justice Owen Roberts to review the whole roster of Selective Service law violations and advise him with respect to granting the amnesty that some groups have urged upon him. Because there is great variety among the cases involved, the board has deemed it wise to review all 16,000 and to make a single recommendation, when it has done this, covering them all. It has been estimated that some 1500 of the 16,000 are genuine conscience cases; this is to say that the men involved disobeyed the law not on account of fear, caprice or for personal advantage but because conscientious scruples, however mistaken, forbade their performance of what the law required. It has never seemed to us that these men should have been allowed with impunity to defy an act of Congress which made reasonable allowance for their scruples. We have long argued, however, that the vindictiveness and wastefulness of the treatment accorded them by Selective Service which administered the Civilian Public Service camps to which they were assigned goaded them to violation and that the courts tended to mete out to them excessive punishment.

About 4500 of the cases involve Jehovah's Witnesses who claimed exemption from the law on the ground that they were ministers of the gospel. Although we do not believe there is any moral or intellectual justification for this stand, we think these people are rather more to be pitied than blamed and that, in any case, they have probably suffered punishment enough for their peculiarly irrational intransigeance. The rest, approximately 10,000, are largely willful violators—draft dodgers—whose conduct seems less entitled to generosity. The task of the President's board is to deal with these cases discriminatingly, and it is a task which cannot be hurried. We hope, however, that it will be completed as speedily as justice permits and that justice will be tempered with mercy. It is interesting to recall that as long ago as January, Dr. George Gallup reported that 69 per cent of the American people favored releasing conscientious objectors from prison; and even 61 per cent of the veterans questioned gave the same response. Surely there is indication here that a presidential amnesty would have the backing of a general forgiveness—at least for those who erred through conscience.

Opening Gun

Senator Taft's speech at the Columbus, Ohio, Republican rally definitely puts him in the running as a candidate for the Presidency, even though his final decision has been deferred until he has tested public sentiment on a Western speaking tour and is in a better position to weigh his chances of nomination and election. It is our belief that the American people will have no doubt whatever as to where Mr. Taft stands on every important issue of domestic and foreign policy by the time that tour is completed. As a matter of fact that Columbus address, which took the form of an aggressive defense of the work of the Republican Congress in which he was the guiding spirit, is a surprisingly comprehensive declaration of his political beliefs and objectives.

There is no need to repeat familiar arguments advanced by Mr. Taft in favor of tax reduction except to say that he does less than justice to those who opposed the Republican tax bill by implying that they are all believers in reckless spending. On the other hand his defense of the Taft-Hartley labor law is a particularly persuasive refutation of charges that the act is designed to enslave labor. In respect to foreign policy Mr. Taft was less definite, though it is expected that he will have more to say on that subject at a later date. However, he made it very clear that though "not happy about the country's foreign policy," he acknowledged that policy to be primarily an Executive responsibility with which Congress should not interfere except under great provocation. Moreover, while stressing the need for caution in giving aid to foreign countries, he would not close the door to further aid provided precautions are taken to insure productive use of materials and equipment. Certainly there is nothing in his statement to warrant the assumption that the Senator from Ohio is an isolationist who discounts the economic and political dangers to this country of disordered world economies.

Mr. Taft displayed characteristic courage in referring to the need for extensive programs of Federal aid in the fields of health, education and housing, although admitting that strong differences of opinion exist among the Republicans about methods of procedure. At the same time he struck back at Democratic critics of Republican inaction in telling fashion by pointing out that they had been in power 14 years without enacting such comprehensive programs.

In addition to outlining and defending the policies in which he believes, Mr. Taft also made a vigorous political assault on the Administration and the President, particularly in respect to foreign policy. He charged that President Roosevelt and President Truman had, through the agreements made at Tehran, Yalta and Potsdam, "practically abandoned all the ideals for which the war was fought," while our German policy is said to have wrecked the economy of Europe. In his studied ignoring of the obstructionist role of Russia in defeating our purposes, Mr. Taft is, we think, hitting below the belt. However, in his attacks on President Truman's domestic policies, he has shown great skill in penetrating the weak spots in his opponent's political armor.

More important than a gift for political sparring, in a man who aspires to be President, is Mr. Taft's willingness, in fact eagerness, to let the public know exactly where he stands. That sort of frankness makes for intelligent voting and enables candidates for office to avoid the temptation of attracting votes by trying to be all things to all men.

SHADOWS

The shadows of thy love, O God,
Are on us everywhere—
Slow blue on snow,
Clear dark on green,
They press and purge the air.
No matter where I turn or go,
Your love, at rest, is there.

"Wedemeyer In China"

My attention has been called to your editorial of July 15, "Wedemeyer in China."

This editorial starts out with some factual statements and then follows along with a statement about millions of Koreans who lived in Manchuria before the war. This is an error; the number of Koreans in Manchuria never amounted to as much as one million. The statements about the Chiang Kai-shek government are equally erroneous. The government of Chiang Kai-shek consists very largely of the disciples of Sun Yat-sen who instead of being reactionaries as used currently are Socialists. This is a large part of the trouble with this government.

Furthermore, the recently adopted constitution of China, which was in the throes of adoption when I was in Nanking last November, will call for an election in the near future in Nationalist China which will, I am sure, indicate that you are greatly mistaken when you think that Chiang Kai-shek does not have the support and sympathy of the great mass of the Chinese people.

Your main error, it seems to me, is in your omission from this editorial of all consideration of our traditional open door policy. This policy has been abandoned since 1944 under pressure from the left wing group in our State Department. It, however, was the cause for our conflict with Japan; and if we abandon that policy now, we might better never have fought the war in the Pacific.

District Civil Service

The writer would like to correct a false assumption concerning the numbers of alleged "Washingtonians" and their families who it is claimed occupy a number of Federal Government positions. They are not bona fide Washingtonians. Hundreds retain a "voting status" for "political purposes" in their home States. They are domiciled back home. If through carelessness or indifference they fail to vote in elections they are quick to reactivate their Capitol Hill insurance policy when a Government shake-up appears.

However, numbers of non-bona fide Washingtonians have occupied District of Columbia government positions through the failure of Congress to enact a District of Columbia civil service system in 70-odd years. Only bona fide Washingtonians with a "voteless status" should be appointed to these positions. They have paid heavily for the right to work in their own government.

British In Palestine

In a letter to the editor in The Washington Post of July 31, the question is asked, "Why blame the British for the thankless task of enforcing the law?" There is only one answer. The British rulers have permitted imperial interests to take precedence over considerations of justice. They have defaulted at every turn since they enforced the illegal White Paper of 1939 on the Jews.

They have deliberately fomented chaos and misery and terror on the Jews in Palestine and especially, on those who are seeking to leave the displaced persons' camps of Europe to enter their homeland in Palestine as of right and not on sufferance, as stated in the British Balfour Declaration, which legal document the Colonial Office of Britain has ignored.

The British rulers have exhibited singular lack of understanding in their administration and have thus lost the confidence of progressives and liberals throughout the world.

Violence in Palestine would cease the moment the British declared to the world that she intended to permit unrestricted immigration of the tragic remnants of Jewish displaced persons into Palestine.

Unwarranted Leniency

Less than two weeks ago the police trial board of Washington recommended the dismissal of a Seventh Precinct policeman for unnecessarily beating a student of Georgetown University. Other charges were also included. Then and there the matter should have been closed. Now, however, a group of "businessmen," with the aid of Representative Smith of Virginia and Senator Hoey of North Carolina, is asking the District Commissioners to give the cop "another chance."

These "businessmen" and members of Congress do not represent the majority of the citizens of Washington. For the sake of justice, a letter ought to be sent to the District Commissioners asking them to ignore any request made on the part of businessmen, or Congressmen, in the case of the dismissed private. It is significant to point out that when the police trial board recommended dismissal it was concerned with the welfare of the people at large and not an individual.

Mental Illness

The July 27 letter in your columns on psychiatry amuses me. According to Dr. Henri Laugier, eminent French psychiatrist, "mental disorders are not contagious in the sense that influenza or diphtheria are, but normal persons will be affected by the abnormal human beings with whom they associate."

Modern civilization, the abnormal regime of living it imposes and the pace at which man travels, are all tending to augment mental troubles.

A veritable epidemic of mental disorders is spreading throughout the civilized world. Although these maladies of the mind are not so contagious as other communicable diseases, they are, nevertheless, affecting the spirit and undermining the mental health and tranquillity of mankind.

If mental ills continue to increase at the present rate, the normal people of the world will find it hard indeed to maintain their mental equilibrium and balance, for they will be hedged in by the abnormal, and their very numbers will preclude the possibility of escape to a saner and more wholesome environment.

But even all this turmoil and agitation might not be insupportable were it not for the fact that our civilization forces us to maintain certain standards, thus adding to the strain of living. We must pay high rents, buy good clothes, have a car like our neighbors own. Economic pressure is great, and the wage-earner is constantly worrying about his income, its possible elasticity, his job, his bills, the necessaries and the luxuries of his complicated life. Sometimes the anxieties become too great. He either breaks or seeks temporary escape.

From all indications the "Speed age" is driving the world crazy!

Lincoln And Chief Justice Chase

The Lincoln papers have, so far as they have been examined, proved a disappointment to the so-called "experts," who hoped to find sensations in them. But they are not without supreme value to the reverent students of Lincoln's Presidency.

You were eminently correct in your editorial of July 28 in assuming that "the official biographers, Nicolay and Hay . . . were naturally solicitous for the President's reputation," and having access to these papers, "culled them pretty carefully." There are many documents in these papers that they did not use, and, failing to use, gave a wrong interpretation on one of the most important acts of Lincoln's Presidency—the appointment of Salmon P. Chase to be the Chief Justice of the United States.

They devote a whole chapter in Volume IX to this appointment. As you read it you gather the impression that Chase's was the only name before the President, and that Chase was in his mind for the place long before Chief Justice Taney died. They tell us that Chase's enemies in Ohio bitterly opposed the appointment, a fact which the papers do not bear out; and they forbear telling us that Lincoln had before him the names of several celebrated lawyers and jurists whose indorsements made those of Chase seem trivial.

One of these lawyers was William M. Evarts, then at the head of the American Bar. Another was Montgomery Blair, who had been a judge in Missouri and besides having been Postmaster General stood at the head of the Washington bar. The court itself, led by Lincoln's great friend, Justice David Davis, plugged for Justice Swayne, who had very fine indorsements from the bar in several States.

Nicolay and Hay quote Lincoln as saying: "I have only one doubt about his (Chase's) appointment. He is a man of unbounded ambition and has been working all his life to become President. That he can never be, and I fear that if I make him Chief Justice he will simply become more restless and uneasy and neglect the place in his strife and intrigue to make himself President." Which is exactly what he did.

Lincoln was not the only eminent man of that day who had this opinion of Chase. Thomas Ewing of Ohio, former Senator and onetime Secretary of the Interior, the foremost man in that State, wrote the President before the appointment was made:

"I write to express to you the opinion that Chase would not be acceptable to the bar of Ohio as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. He has no considerable reputation as a lawyer. He is a politician rather than a lawyer and unless he change his nature always will be, even if made Chief Justice. I am unwilling to see a Chief Justice of the United States intriguing and trading for the Presidency."

Students of Lincoln will have to study all the documents in the Lincoln papers relating to the Chase appointment before they reach a conclusion as to why Lincoln made that appointment. It is known that he hated Chase and that Chase hated him. It is known that neither had any confidence in the other. It will now seem that, aside from the indorsement of the small abolition group with which he trained, Chase had little important support anywhere.

Why, then, should Lincoln, after slavery was abolished, have given this great position to Charles Sumner and the Massachusetts and Ohio abolitionists? Perhaps the Lincoln papers will answer that, and this is only one of several very important questions that the opening of the Lincoln papers will reopen.

Posting The Books

Malebolge

FOREST OF THE DEAD, by Ernst Wiechert. (Greenberg, $2.50.)

FIVE CHIMNEYS, by Olga Lengyel. (Ziff-Davis, $3).

Together these books, translated from three languages, afford a fairly complete summary of what is probably the most frightful chapter in the long and terrible annals of the human race. They are memoirs of the Nazi concentration camps in which millions of men, women and children perished in the space of little more than a half dozen years, most of them by ingeniously calculated methods of direct and indirect murder. The appalling thing, however, is not the number of the victims, since for all anybody knows it may have been exceeded in the grandiose massacres of Jenghiz Khan or in the artificial famines and class liquidations within the Soviet Union; and was in any case far less than the death toll of the great plagues of 1918-19. The real horror is rather in the revelation of to what an abyss of degradation the human spirit may be reduced by the instruments of terror that physical and psychological science have placed in the possession of demoniac governments.

Of the three testimonies that of Mme. Lengyel, a Romanian, is the most circumstantial, the most dramatic, the most replete with unimaginable horrors. Hers has to do with the monstrous genocide industry at Auschwitz, or Oswiecim, where, according to some calculations, more than four million persons of every age, but perhaps the greater part of them children, died in the gas chambers or from hunger and torture and where the corpses were fed night and day into the great furnaces. Among them were Mme. Lengyel's parents and her two young sons; her husband, a surgeon, and also a prisoner at the camp, was killed by an S. S. guard. Her memoir contains some evidence of having been worked over by the professional writers and editors to whom she acknowledges an indebtedness and is for that reason perhaps the least impressive of the three. M. Rousset is a French journalist who was arrested for some underground activity; his testimony is detached, philosophic and almost dispassionate, and perhaps the more shocking for its terrible calmness. Herr Wiechert is a German lyric poet of East Prussian origin and Lutheran persuasion, whose work, little known in this country, is, it seems, very highly regarded abroad. In 1938 he was arrested by the Gestapo, apparently because of a letter he had written in protest of the imprisonment of the famous Pastor Niemoeller. After many weeks in prison Herr Wiechert was transferred to the camp whence his memoir obtains its title, for Buchenwald, now a name of such evil association, means literally the beechwood forest.

The three narratives complement and support each other. In Herr Wiechert's time at Buchenwald the population of the camps was of course almost wholly German and Austrian, and although the brutal regimen was doubtless deliberately designed to kill off the weak and the aged, the policy of general extermination was as yet applied only to Jews, and even to them by the slower processes of torture and starvation. They were assigned the heaviest labor, given half the rations of the other prisoners, and "no food on Sundays, and suffered fasting days as punishment for every slightest reason"; the weaker of them were soon reduced to a state where they "begged the guards for a bullet as a man begs for a cooling drink of water." The daily sight of such evils shook the poet to the bottom of his faith. He had entered upon his prison life proud of his poise in suffering for justice's sake; now he cried again and again to himself that God was dead. A more experienced prisoner warned him that if he wished to survive he must somehow harden his heart. "You must go through this like a stone. . . . Here one who suffers with the rest must break." And yet the sensitive Wiechert was spared the more harrowing experience of seeing the prisoners, in their lust of survival, reduced to the levels of bestiality, rivaling that of their masters, described by M. Rousset and Mme. Lengyel. In Herr Wiechert's time even amid the general despair, a fellowship in suffering, a mutual helpfulness and sacrifice, existed among the prisoners. Treachery, theft, murder, sodomy, cannibalism and fierce political intrigue and racial rivalry had not yet become the everyday pattern of prison camp life.

M. Rousset interprets his experience wholly in sociological terms, and the conclusion that he draws from it is the terrible one that man and his moralities are creatures of his material situation. Thus he finds the German concentration camps to have been products of a world-wide economic and social crisis, in which "the mainspring of idealism has run down," and forecasts that elsewhere "under a new guise similar effects may appear tomorrow." But Herr Wiechert, the poet, seeks to discover a spiritual meaning in his ordeal and in what he calls the shame of his nation. And though he does not seem quite able to find it, the quest nevertheless gives his book the greater poignancy—and perhaps a greater wisdom.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

The Rocks Are There

THROUGH THE TURMOIL of the day-to-day news, two vast facts show up like huge and menacing submerged rocks, which are now washed over, now left naked, in stormy water. First, the Soviet Union is plainly giving serious thought to employing its obedient satellite states in new aggressive moves of the most critical character. Second, the slowness of American succor for a desperate Britain and Europe has permitted critical weakening of the Western world's power to resist these aggressions if they are finally ordered by the Kremlin.

It is, of course, in the Greek situation that the first act is most apparent. The American State Department and British foreign office have been in consultation for some time on the meaning of the various moves on the puppet side of the Greek frontier. And it can now be stated on excellent authority that a decidedly threatening significance is tentatively ascribed to these goings and comings in Bulgaria and Yugoslavia.

The evidence for this tentative conclusion, so far as it has been disclosed, consists of items of information like the pieces of a puzzle. For example, it is now known that Yugoslavia has recruited and trained a Macedonian brigade from dissident Greek Macedonians, and has incorporated this unit in the Yugoslav army. The brigade is now reported stationed at Bitolj, in position for a move to "liberate the fatherland" if need be. At Sofia, in Bulgaria, "free" Macedonians have also been holding rallies for an independent Macedonia. And on several levels, culminating in the recent talks between Marshal Tito and Georgei Dimitrov, representatives of the Yugoslav and Bulgarian governments have been in busy conference.

THESE AND OTHER bits of information have been fitted into the final conclusion, which is very simple that an offensive to establish a "free Macedonia" is now contemplated. It is thought that Tito and Dimitrov agreed upon plans for this effort.

It is thought further that the frontiers and organization of the new "free Macedonia" have already been decided upon. If the contemplated moves are undertaken and succeed, the "Free Macedonian" capital will certainly be at Salonika, and it is considered probable that Tito and Dimitrov mean to supplement the territory of the new state with small portions of Yugoslav and Bulgarian territory. It is further assumed that the plans include the eventual establishment of a greater South Slav federation, comprising all the Kremlin's Balkan puppets, in which the new Macedonian "state" would play a role similar to Albania's.

As stated above, these conclusions are of course only tentative, and certain American analysts tend to dissent. The probable truth is that the plans described above (the existence of which will of course be denied with screeches of indignation) have actually been prepared, but for use on an if, as, and when basis. In short, these plans will be put in motion if the Kremlin calculates that the West will not react decisively. The Soviet veto of the proposed Balkan border commission plainly supports this interpretation.

Under the circumstances, the much better publicized developments in Britain take on an additionally alarming aspect. For some time, officials of the British government have been hinting both to our permanent representatives in London and to traveling high American officials, that something very serious might occur in the near future.

THE TRUTH IS that in their appalling economic situation, the British government had been consistently acting on the most hopeful assumptions, now that events have instead substantiated all the gloomiest forecasts, the British are confronted with the catastrophic prospect of exhaustion of their resources for buying food and raw materials abroad before the Marshall Plan can come into operation.

The result has been the series of emergency cabinet and Labor Party meetings, at which a general contraction of British commitments has necessarily been agreed upon. The worst of it evidently is that plans for this contraction include withdrawal of the expensive garrisons in Greece, as well as reduction of the British troops in Italy. The American Government has long been notified that these moves would have to be made eventually, but in the face of the possibility of another push by the Kremlin, the timing could hardly be worse.

Nonetheless, there are two hopeful aspects of the situation. First, the British are finally facing the harsh realities of their position, which in the long run may be healthy if the United States does its part. Second, in the event of an open threat of another Kremlin push, both governments are understood to have agreed already, in principle, to display the utmost firmness. The plight of Britain must obviously tempt the Kremlin, as does the chaos in Greece. Yet if the leaders of the Soviet Union are aware that true firmness will eventually be encountered, they can be counted on to be cautious in the end. Lenin once remarked that certain situations had to be "probed with bayonets," but the implication of this was that if the bayonets struck anything unyielding, it was time to call a halt.

The Unregistered Lobbyists

A GREAT DEAL has been written about the activity of the swarm of lobbyists who hovered over Congress during the session just ended. Veterans on Capitol Hill say that seldom has there been such persistence coupled with such boldness on the part of the pressure boys.

The Reorganization Act adopted a year ago required lobbyists to register with Congress, listing the groups they represented and their salaries. To date about 850 lobbyists have complied with the law. What is more, the statute provides a fine of $5000 or imprisonment for not more than a year, or both, for failing to register.

A year's test has shown, however, that there is a serious defect in this provision. It's a defect, that is, if the law was really meant to put on public record the lobbyists and their connections. Nothing is said in the law about initiating action against lobbyists who fail to register.

THIS IS HOW it has worked out in practice. At least 20,000 applications for registration blanks have come to the Senate and the House from those who apparently believed in the first instance that they came under the terms of the law and were required to register. Some unions asked for up to 50 blanks. So did several large corporations. But the total of registration blanks returned filled out is less than 5 per cent of the number originally applied for.

Nearly every day during the past session, someone phoned in to say that they had seen John Doe in the lobby of the House or the Senate or buttonholding a Congressman in one of the hotels, and that they knew he was working for this or that interest. Senate and House officials charged with registering the lobbyists were aware that the law was being violated, and probably on a wholesale scale. But they did not know what they could do about it.

Here is an example that ties in with today's headlines. Representatives of the leading airline companies lobbied furiously during the past session both for and against the "chosen instrument" bill which would provide a single monopoly for United States overseas air operation. The activity of these men was fairly well known. They have been frequently referred to as lobbyists. Yet an examination of the record shows that not one of them is registered with Congress as a lobbyist.

The law says specifically that "any person who shall engage himself for pay or for any consideration for the purpose of attempting to influence the passage or defeat of any legislation . . . shall, before doing anything in furtherance of such object, register with the clerk of the House of Representatives and the secretary of the Senate . . ."

Some of these airline lobbyists have spent most of their time working on Congress. Some are executives of their respective corporations and move in and out of Washington. They might claim that lobbying was not their principal activity as specified in the law.

AN ANALYSIS of the statute in the Yale Law Review expresses the belief, however, that corporation executives would have to register even though lobbying was only one of their duties. And that same view is held by others who have studied the lobby provisions.

The Department of Justice is just now analyzing the list of lobbyists who have complied with the law. Attorney General Tom Clark will not confirm the report that the inquiry is to be extended to cover those who failed to register.

There is a question of the power of the Attorney General in this instance. The law applies to Congress and, under our system of divided powers, the executive branch of the Government walks softly where the privileges and prerogatives of the legislative branch are concerned.

A law that anyone can conveniently ignore is far worse than no law at all. As foreign critics like to remind us, we are at the same time the most lawless and the most law-minded people on earth.

When Congress comes back, the provision governing lobbyists can be tightened. Means can be provided for enforcing the law. As it stands, it is little more than a well-meaning gesture. Such gestures usually end by making Government and the lawmakers look pretty foolish.

Elliott And Hughes

By Ernest Lindley

ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT, as a colonel in Army Air Forces, recommended in August, 1943, that the AAF order, with some modifications, a photo-reconnaissance plane designed by Howard Hughes. Various Air Force generals charged with the design, testing, and procurement of planes had previously advised against the purchase of this plane. They stood their ground, renewing their advice, after Elliott Roosevelt made his recommendation. However, General H. H. Arnold, Commanding General of the Army Air Forces, decided to take the advice of Elliott Roosevelt. An order for the planes was placed.

Lindley

Elliott Roosevelt was extensively entertained at one time or another at the expense of Howard Hughes. Through Hughes' public relations representative he met Faye Emerson, now his third wife.

The inference is that Elliott was entertained into recommending the purchase of an inferior plane and that, because of his White House connections, he was able to persuade General Arnold to overrule the advice of his staff.

THERE ARE, HOWEVER, some flaws in this circumstantial case. The first is that Elliott Roosevelt was choosing a plane for his own officers and men, including himself. He was then a colonel in charge of aerial photo-reconnaissance in Northwest Africa. Whether he would have ever reached this eminence if he had not been a son of the President no one will ever know. But there has been no accusation to this date that he did not measure up to his responsibility in the field or that he was lacking in personal courage. He frequently flew behind the enemy's lines.

In his own words, written later, "To map an objective from the air means maintaining straight flight-lines and set altitudes, so that all your pictures will be the same scale; it means flying in a stripped-down ship that carries no guns for defense; it denies the pilot opportunity for evasive flying; to sum up, it ain't fun."

Elliott's outfit, as he wrote, was losing planes at the rate of 20 per cent per month. Within 90 days after his outfit reached North Africa, less than 10 per cent of its original group of pilots were able to answer roll-call. It appeared that, among other things, our photo-reconnaissance planes were too slow and otherwise deficient in design.

In August, 1943, Elliott was recalled to Washington, together with the colonel who was in charge of photo-reconnaissance in the Pacific. Elliott wanted a much faster photo-reconnaissance plane, and he had the casualty figures to show the need for one. He was sent out to look for one. After surveying the field, he recommended the plane designed by Howard Hughes. Incidentally, the prototype of this plane had been called to the attention of the President more than a year earlier by Jesse Jones. The President had forwarded Mr. Jones' letter to General Arnold with the inquiry: "What is there in this?"

ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT has shown bad judgment about a good many things, including his book, which misrepresents his father's views with respect to several critical diplomatic decisions of the war. His judgment about airplanes also may have been faulty. But photo-reconnaissance was his business at the time, and it was a hazardous business. Whether his choice of a plane was good, bad, or indifferent, it is hard to believe that it was not honest, since it involved the lives of his officers and men, and perhaps his own life as well.

Likewise, it is impossible to believe that Gen. "Hap" Arnold was swayed by any ulterior motive. He did not need to curry favor with the White House. In the AAF, as in other branches of the service, there were continual differences of opinion between the men who designed and ordered weapons and those who used them. The best-laid designs often went awry in battle. And, in the AAF, in particular, there was a tendency to subordinate the needs for special types of craft to the large-scale demand for long range bombers, transports and, after unfortunate experiences without them, long-range fighters.

All the competent commanding officers found out, if they did not already know, that it was wise to pay some attention to the complaints and recommendations of the men who used weapons on the battlefronts. Elliott Roosevelt had had the battlefront experience in photo-reconaissance and responsibility for it. He was the officer to whose advice, regardless of family or White House connections General Arnold naturally would, and should, give great weight in choosing a plane for that specialized work.

Soil Conservation Program Now Covers Billion U. S. Acres

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

More than a billion acres, or nearly 60 per cent of the Nation's farmland, are now included in farmer-managed soil conservation districts, the Department of Agriculture announced last night.

Today is the tenth anniversary of the soil conservation program. In the decade more than 1900 districts have been organized in the 48 States and Puerto Rico.

Number 1 is the Brown Creek Soil Conservation District, formed August 4, 1937, by farmers of Anson County, N. C. This district has since been expanded to five counties.

Four and One-Half Million Farms

The latest formed is the San Juan Soil Conservation District in Archuleta, Hinsdale and Mineral counties of Colorado. It was this district that pushed the total acreage over the billion-acre mark.

More than half the total land area of the country is now within conservation districts. This includes about 4½ million farms, on three fourths of the Nation's farms and ranches. About 20 new districts are being formed each month.

The Soil Conservation Service has assisted farmers in developing more than half a million complete soil and water conservation farm plans.

Includes Pond Building

The 50 to 60 major measures used include contour tillage and planting, crop rotations, strip cropping, terracing, range and pasture treatment and management, building farm ponds, woodland conservation, farm drainage and irrigation, and wildlife improvement.

The movement, says Dr. Hugh H. Bennett, chief of the Soil Conservation Service, means that "the farmers, together with vast numbers of non-farmer citizens, have made up their minds that we are going to stop the wastage of our basic and indispensable soil resource. It also means that the soil and water conservation job can be done under the direction of local people, the farmers themselves, if they are given necessary technical assistance."

Spain Is Not Threatened From Outside, Report Says

The Foreign Policy Association reported last night that while Franco, the Spanish generalissimo, "is galled by Spain's pariah position in world affairs, his government faces no serious or immediate threat from the outside."

The comment appeared in a survey prepared by Robert Okin, former foreign correspondent in Spain, for the private research organization.

Spain politically "has long been an anachronism," Okin said, "plagued by archaic governmental forms, a succession of inept leaders and a seemingly inherent lack of genius for government.

"Its position in Europe today—an embarrassment to the West, and anathema to the East—is as characteristic as its anomalous political form—a vestigial remnant of the defunct Axis now assuming the trappings of a monarchy completely discredited in 1930."

Okin noted that a recent Spanish referendum made Franco a virtual monarch of the Spanish kingdom and gave him or his appointees the right to choose his successor.

"Left to itself," the newspaperman said, the regime "faces only the possible internal dangers of economic bankruptcy and explosion by a population goaded beyond its physical ability to endure food scarcities and suppression.

"Should adequate economic improvement take place, there would probably be no fundamental change in Spain in the near future. Nevertheless such change must come eventually."

House Group to Weigh Letting Reich, Japan Ship Own Food

By The Associated Press

Chairman Welchel (R., Ohio) said yesterday the House Merchant Marine Committee would consider this fall a plan to charter ships to Germany and Japan for carrying food themselves—an idea first advanced by Herbert Hoover.

Welchel, who introduced the ship-charter measure at the request of the War Department, said the purpose is to effect a substantial economy in supplying food to the two countries. Proponents said it would reduce these nations' dollar expenditures and ease American taxpayer burdens.

Hoover, upon returning from his economic survey of Europe several months ago, suggested that surplus Liberty ships, manned by German and Japanese crews paid in the currency of their countries, could be used for food transport.

Welchel said his committee would meet in September and October to investigate Maritime Commission activities in selling and chartering Government-owned vessels. It will consider the plan at that time, he said.

Welchel made it clear that he introduced the legislation only because of the War Department's contention it would result in a saving to the American taxpayers through a reduction in foreign relief and occupation appropriations.

"The War Department estimates that a minimum saving of 14 million dollars might be expected by the operation of 75 Liberty ships by the Germans for the first year of operation," he said. "It is also claimed that a similar saving would be possible in supplying Japan."

Such a move would be in line with action taken recently in rebuilding Italy's merchant marine.

Bishop May Face Trial As Nazi Sympathizer

Munich, Germany, Aug. 3 (AP).—Dr. Hans Ehard, minister-president of Bavaria, said today a denazification trial was being considered for Bishop Anton Scharnagl on charges made by several Catholic priests who were thrown into concentration camps while Bishop Scharnagle was suffragan bishop.

The Bishop denied the charge.

U. S.-Yugoslavia Phone Service to Resume

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—Telephone service between the United States and Yugoslavia, interrupted by the war, will be resumed Tuesday, the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. announced today.

Initially, service will be limited to Belgrade and Zagres in Yugoslavia. A three-minute call between any point in the United States and the two Yugoslavian cities will cost $12.

Truman May Withdraw Boyd Nomination to Mines Bureau

By the United Press

President Truman is considering withdrawing the disputed nomination of James Boyd of Colorado to be director of the Federal Bureau of Mines, high official sources disclosed last night.

It would be a major victory for John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers (AFL), in his feud with Secretary of Interior J. A. Krug.

Boyd's name was sent to the Senate on Krug's recommendation. Lewis blasted the appointment as "purely political" before the Senate Subcommittee on Mines, and succeeded in blocking action by the committee until shortly before adjournment a week ago.

The committee finally approved Boyd, but Senators Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) and Chapman Revercomb (R., W. Va.) objected to Senate consideration on grounds it might upset adjournment plans.

Boyd is on leave from his post as dean of the Colorado School of Mines and has been a special assistant to Krug since his nomination for the $10,000-a-year post.

One official said Boyd could be given the job temporarily by recess appointment but could receive no pay under a law prohibiting salary payments to recess appointees whose names had been pending for confirmation more than 30 days.

Withdrawal of the nomination is demanded by the Lewis' union in the current edition of the UMW Journal.

The Journal also said there have been rumors of Krug's resignation.

Unionist Calls U. S. Behind in Socialism

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—Frank Rosenblum, vice president of the World Federation of Trade Unions, said today that European Democrats were moving toward Communism because of what he termed America's "opposition to socialization of industry along the lines that have dominated European thought for more than a generation."

"Socialization of utilities, such as railroads," he said upon his return from a nine-week European tour, "has been in existence in Europe for generations and the chaos of war has brought even stronger demands for socialization of basic industries."

Veteran Job Offices Opened in 17 Cities

The Labor Department announced last night that its veterans reemployment rights division has opened field offices in 17 cities to see that veterans get a square deal in their quest for jobs.

'Red Tide' Flows Off Clearwater

Clearwater, Fla., Aug. 3 (AP).—A great mass of dead fish—victims of a mysterious fish plague—was centered off Clearwater Beach today as it moved slowly northward along Florida's Gulf Coast.

Workers buried piles of fish in a trench 2½ miles long farther south.

The so-called "red tide" mass with its tons of dead fish has been estimated to be 60 miles long and about 25 miles wide. Sanitarians said so many big fish are in the mass that it gives appearance "that one could walk across it like logs."

4 Million in Shanghai

Shanghai, Aug. 3 (AP).—Shanghai's population in June was 4,274,486, the largest in history. The housing problem is so acute that thousands of poor Chinese sleep regularly not only on the sidewalks, but also in the traffic-packed streets, oblivious of noise and danger.

Uruguay Is Expected To Keep Same Policies

Montevideo, Uruguay, Aug. 3 (AP). Political circles here said today that President Luis Batlle Berres probably would adopt the same domestic and foreign policy, including close friendship with the United States, as President Tomas Berreta, who died last night.

Batlle, Vice President of Uruguay under Berreta, succeeded automatically to the presidency upon the death of the 71-year-old head of state.

Price Probe Action Pledged By Revercomb

By the United Press

Senator Chapman Revercomb (R., W. Va.) said yesterday that the congressional investigation of prices and the high cost of living will turn the spotlight on "exorbitant" charges and will help in the drive to bring them down.

Revercomb

The inquiry by the joint congressional committee on President Truman's economic report was authorized in the closing days of the last session. It will be made before Congress meets again.

"Abundant production is one of the requirements for a lowering of prices," Revercomb said in a broadcast over West Virginia stations. "There is great production in this country, but it is quickly absorbed by domestic demands and the foreign shipments."

Suggests Legislation

"Self-imposed restraints on prices as well as self-imposed restraints by the purchaser will level prices down," he added. "We want no more government control which creates scarcity and makes it impossible to get needed articles."

Revercomb held out the possibility that legislation dealing with prices may be presented at the next session of Congress.

Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) pointed to the "present high cost of living" as further proof of the need for amendments to the Social Security law, in another broadcast yesterday.

He is cosponsor of a proposal to extend retirement, survivors' and disability insurance to some 20 million persons not covered by the present plan.

Hits at Russia

Revercomb later called on the State Department to make certain that no United States aid is given to countries which "continue to expand philosophies that mean the destruction of America."

He told the annual meeting of the West Virginia American Legion that the department must adopt a clear policy in foreign relations "so that the strength of America will be preserved against any eventuality."

He urged the United States to keep the most modern, effective armed forces "that any country has ever known."

Gen. Chennault Says Army Ban on His Speech Illustrates Dangers of Concealing Criticism

Shanghai, Aug. 3 (U.P.)—Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, former commander of the famed Flying Tigers, today described the Army's action in banning his scheduled Air Forces Day radio address "an illustration of the danger we face by way of bureaucratic concealment and suppression of criticism."

Chennault said, "I believed I had something to say that might be of value.

"The most important message that occurred to me was the warning against the shortcomings of technical preparedness," Chennault said.

"I knew in a personal way the many difficulties and hazards that beset the Air Forces in this regard. Therefore I made that warning the primary part of my speech."

Chennault said that in his speech he drew no distinction between what should be told our armed forces and what should be told to the American public.

(In announcing cancellation, an Army spokesman said the proposed speech contained material unsuitable for the armed services.)

Chennault said that the armed forces "should welcome well-intended criticism."

"Our national life may depend upon self-criticism and the speed with which we respond to it. In the atomic era, time is the most precious commodity," he said.

Sunday Lull Eases Electioneering In Nearby Va.

With Democratic nominations coming up in party primaries in three nearby Virginia communities tomorrow, pre-election activity yesterday was marked by an apparent "Sunday lull" as far as candidates were concerned.

In contrast to the feverish activity that highlighted bitter intra-party disputes in both Arlington and Fairfax counties last week, the candidates appeared content to mark time, awaiting the effects of charges and countercharges. However, some last-minute blasts were expected today in both areas, where comparative newcomers are bucking "machine" organizations.

In Alexandria, the campaign has attracted little interest. The only contest there involves election of two Democratic Committee members from the Sixth Ward. Candidates in all other wards are unopposed.

The Arlington campaign has been highlighted by the effort of the recently organized Progressive Democrats to oust a number of old-line officeholders. In Fairfax, most of the incumbents supported by the "courthouse crowd" are opposed by representatives of an "insurgent" faction. Both counties will choose nominees for the State Legislature and a number of local offices.

Group Will Guard Rights of Tenants

Americans for Democratic Action, anti-Communist progressive group, launched a Nationwide campaign yesterday to protect tenants' rights under the new rent control law.

ADA, headed by former Housing Expediter Wilson W. Wyatt, said Carl Auerbach, former general counsel for OPA, and Gerhard P. Van Arkel, former general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, will direct work of a new voluntary legal committee that will keep "vigilant watch" over administration of the new law.

They have asked prominent attorneys in 25 major cities to assist them, ADA said. The group will not handle individual tenant cases.

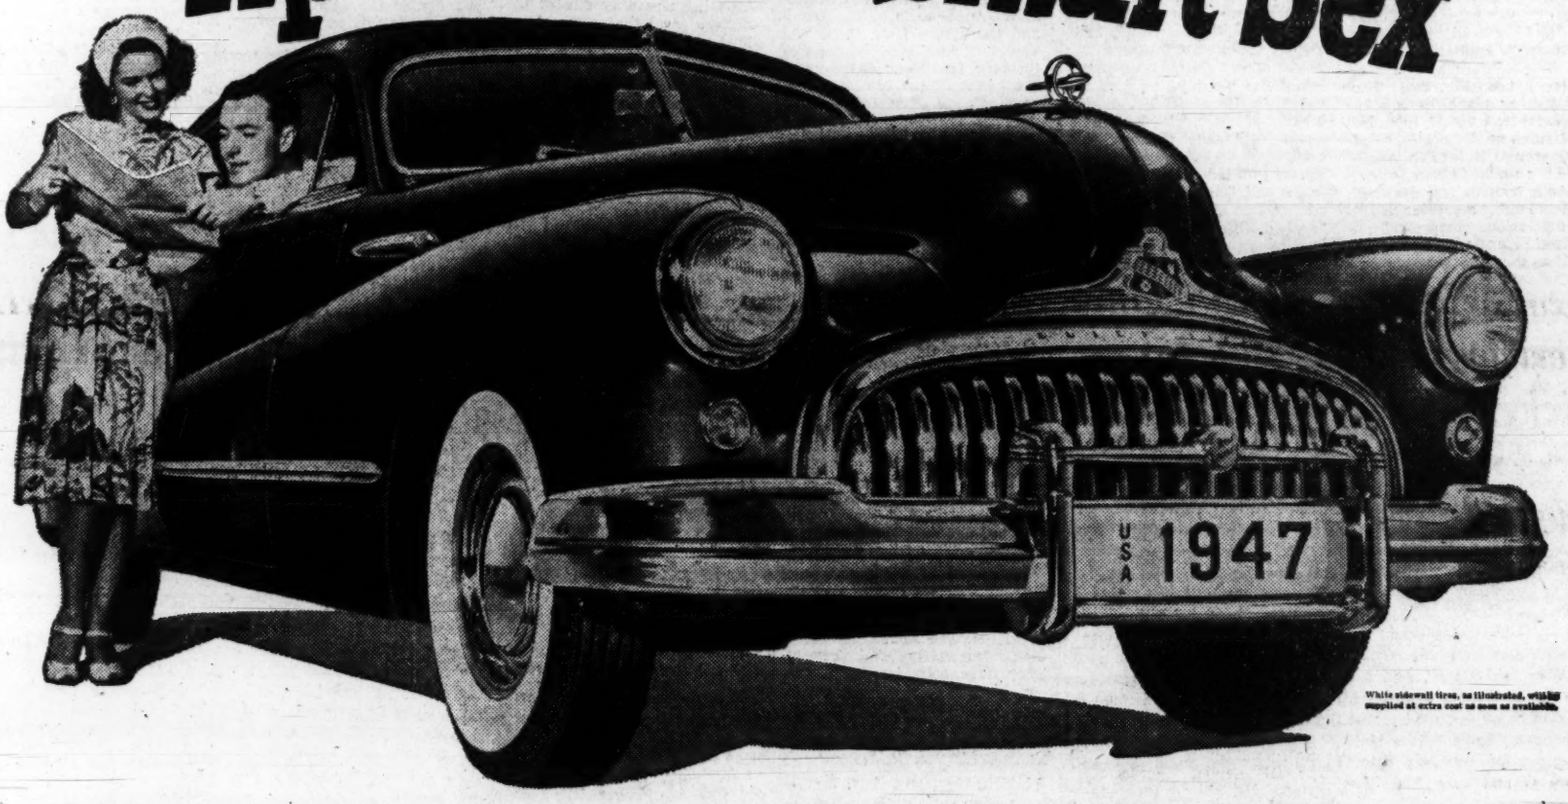
Tip from the Smart Sex



White sidewall tires, as illustrated, will be supplied at extra cost as soon as available.

WHO is it that's first to spot — and quickest to go for — a really fresh new fashion idea when it comes along?

The ladies, of course!

And who is it that, according to careful surveys, put Buick far ahead of its price class and up among the lowest-priced three when they name the car of their innermost choice?

The fair sex — but naturally!

And who is it, when you come right down to it, that gets the most practical use from enough stirring Fireball power to handle the day's travel-jobs without strain and struggle?

Who relishes most the restful ease of wide, cushiony seats, and the blissful gentleness of all-coil springs that make rough roads well-mannered and good roads glass-smooth?

Who goes for a car big enough to be company-minded — yet light and easy enough in handling to park without a tussle, and flit shadow-light through market-hour traffic?

Who, good friends, has the family's smartest eye-for-a-buy — the shrewdest size-up of what's really good?

No one but the Lady of the Household!

So we toss out this thought to you menfolks:

Chances are that you've been hankering for the kind of thrill that lurks in this great-hearted, great-powered beauty.

You'd sort of like to get your hands on a car as big and mighty as this — if you thought the better half could be sold on it.

Take our tip — she's already sold. Favored as it is by red-blooded males, no Buick we've ever offered has won the smart sex quite like this one.

So why not pull a pleasant surprise some evening soon? Just come home and say, "Well, I placed an order for a Buick today. They're taking 'em with or without a car to trade."

Then watch her fall all over your neck!

Dodgers Lose Another, So Do Nats

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

HERBIE JONES is conceding height, weight, reach and experience to Johnny Bratton tonight at Griffith Stadium, but he thinks he's taking the great equalizer into the ring with him. I'll be the only guy in there who can punch," says Jones. "Punching can slow him up awful quick."

POVICH

There have been attempts all week by Promoter Gabe Menendez and Bratton's handlers to sell the punching prowess of the Chicago colored boy along with his boxing skill. Wondrous tales have come from Bratton's workouts at Turner's Arena, where, supposedly, he has been stopping partners cold or numbing 'em just short of a kayo.

But Harry Groves, manager of Jones, is very much unimpressed. "We took the fight because we knew Bratton can't hurt Jones. I'd be crazy to put the Biffer in there with a man who can do all the things Bratton does, and punching besides. I'm bringing Jones along more carefully than that. He may get licked by Bratton, but he won't get hurt."

THOSE REALISTS who lay the odds agree that Bratton ought to lick Jones. Leastwise, five will still get you ten today if you like Jones' prospects. Young Jones is hankering for some of those odds himself with part of his purse money, but Groves has vetoed that idea.

"Herbie doesn't have to bet on himself to be a big winner," says Groves. "If he can lick Bratton, the big dough will really open up for him. There will be a big gate for a return match in Chicago if we want it, and we can fight in New York, Cleveland, Philadelphia, or most anywhere. If they raise Herbie's right hand tonight, he'll be a rich young man."

There's excuse for the belief that Jones is overmatched, however. He has never tangled with such as Bratton, who has been in with the top lightweights and beaten a lot of them. Before Jones stopped Johnny Nichols in one round on the Graziano-Zale card at Chicago, his peak achievement was kayoing Lew Hanbury, who never quite was a good fighter.

GROVES' PROBLEM with Jones is to slow the pace of the young Biffer. "He wants to knock everybody out in one round," Groves complains. "He was unhappy when I told him to box Hanbury for the first round. I forgot to tell him to box him in the second round, so he walked out and belted Hanbury out in that one."

What Jones has been going for in addition to his zest for fighting and the punch he carries is his southpaw style that is always bothersome to righthanders. He makes the most of it, too. There's nothing extreme about Jones' southpaw stance. He squares away almost like a righthander half the time, and his right hand has authority, too.

"I hope Bratton tries to fight him like he'd fight other southpaws," said Groves. "That's what Nichols tried to do in Chicago, and Herbie crossed him with a right to set him up for the knockout with his left. He'll hurt Bratton with both hands if he lands."

THE BRATTON FIGHT is merely a piece in the long-range program Groves has for Jones. He admits that he might be putting his boy in over his head and understands that Jones could lose. "But he won't get hurt, and I want to see what he can do against a smart boxer who will try to tie him up and probably spin him and try to make him look silly.

"So far, Jones has been learning fast, and I think he'll catch on. In the gym he's getting pretty cute against big fellows who use their weight and try to turn him around. He lets 'em do it, but no half spins so they can belt him. He knows enough to go all the way around if they're too smart for him."

There's nothing wrong with Jones' confidence. He knew he would fight Bratton the night he stopped Nichols in one round at Chicago. They had scarcely picked Nichols off the floor in 1:46 of the first round when Jones walked to his own corner and said to Groves: "I hope Bratton wasn't looking."

Cubs Whip Bums, 6-0, Third in Row Lead Cut to 7

Chicago, Aug. 3 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs made it three straight from the first place Brooklyn Dodgers, behind the seven hit pitching of Johnny Schmitz, today winning 6 to 0.

The loss cut another game off of the Dodgers rapidly decreasing lead. St. Louis, who beat the Phils, 10-8 now trails by seven games.

Ralph Branca held the Cubs to a single until a four-hit outbreak produced three Chicago runs in the fifth. Successive singles by Len Merulo, Schmitz and Peanuts Lowrey counted the first run. An infield out, a single by Andy Pafko and a long fly to center led to Chicago's next two runs.

Branca fell apart in the seventh, issuing a walk to Lowrey and hitting Eddie Waitkus with a pitched ball. After reliefer Hal Gregg had walked Pafko to fill the bases, Cavarretta drove across Lowrey and Waitkus with a single to left. The final Chicago run came in the eighth on a triple by Len Merullo and a double by Waitkus.

Schmitz, who before the game was presented a new automobile by the homefolks of Wausau, Wis., allowed only three hits in the first seven innings, but loosened to contribute two in the eighth and in the ninth.

Cards Cut Dodger Lead to 7; Win, 10-8

St. Louis, Aug. 3 (AP).—Ted Wilks checked a four-run uprising in the eighth and Murray Dickson halted another threat in the ninth today, and saved the game for Ken Burkhardt in the St. Louis Cardinals' 10-to-8 triumph over Fred Schmidt and the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Cards, by winning, cut the Dodger lead to seven games.

The Redbirds had built up an 8 to-2 advantage when Harry Walker came to the plate in the Phillies' half of the eighth. His three-run homer sent Burkhardt to the showers and Al Brazle took the mound. He forced Del Ennis to ground to Marty Marion, but then gave up a walk and two singles, one of them producing the Phillies' fourth run of the inning and the sixth of the game. Wilks relieved to retire Pinchbatter Jim Tabor and Emil Verban.

McNeill Advances In Eastern Play

South Orange, N. J., Aug. 3.—Don McNeill of nearby Orange, the 1940 National Champion who is confining his activity to local tournaments this year, swept into the third round of the men's singles of the Eastern Grass Courts tennis championships today with a smoothly executed 6—0, 6—1 triumph over J. L. Blackmon of Miami, Fla., at the Orange Lawn Tennis Club.

Seeded No. 4, McNeill had no trouble gaining his victory, charging the net time and again for winners against his less experienced opponent.

Cambria Called To Explain 'Under Table' Charges

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Aug. 3 (AP).—Directors of the Class C Florida International League today demanded that Joseph Cambria, secretary-treasurer of the league-leading Havana Cubans, and a scout for the Washington Senators, appear before President Wayne Allen to answer questions pertaining to financial dealings by the club or be expelled from the league.

The demand stemmed from an investigation ordered by Minor League President George Trautman into alleged "under the table" salary payments by the Havana club to team members.

Trautman asked the investigation after Branch Rickey, sr., and Mel Jones, of the Brooklyn Dodgers, filed charges that three Havana players—Pitchers Rafael Rivas and Ray Martinez and Catcher Mario Diaz—purchased for $20,000 by the Brooklyn Dodgers and sent to Montreal, were alleged to have claimed that the $250 salary Montreal offered was less than they could get from the Havana club.

Chisox Win On Michaels' Double in Seventh, 2-1

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Frank Papish, left-handed pitcher, and Cass Michaels, right-handed hitter, ganged up on the Nats yesterday and licked 'em, 2 to 1, before 6500 un-thrilled Washington fans yesterday.

Papish, who leads the White Sox pitchers with the modest record of nine wins and seven defeats, held the Nats in the grip of a seven-hit pitching job and shut 'em out after the first inning while Michaels muscled in both Chicago runs.

In each case, Michaels whacked Ray Scarborough's pitching for a two-base hit, scoring Luke Appling who walked in the second inning and was on base again in the seventh when Michaels delivered.

Good Pitching Wasted

Scarborough did a completely creditable and completely useless job of pitching for the Nats, who got only one man as far as second base in the last eight innings. When the Nats did threaten in the seventh and eighth, the Sox cut 'em down with double plays.

It was a very fuzzy kind of two-bagger that Michaels hit in the second inning to tie the score at 1-1, at that point, after Appling walked with two out. It was a twisting pop fly that he plunked over Yost's head, and took a crazy bounce toward the field boxes, delaying Christman's retrieve of the ball. Appling scored all the way from first.

There was nothing spotty about Michaels' big seventh-inning hit that broke the 1-1 deadlock, however. Appling, who opened the inning with a single to right and stole second, romped home easily when Michaels lashed a line-drive two-bagger to right. Only a super relay from Lewis by Gerry Priddy that cut Michaels down at third when he tried to stretch the hit averted further damage for Scarborough at that point.

Nats Start Fast

The Nats commenced the ball game in inspiring fashion. McBride doubled with two out in the first inning and Vernon promptly scored him with a single to center to set Scarborough up in a 1-0 lead.

Then they abandoned him with that one run, getting only one other hit until the sixth inning, when McBride and Vernon singled in succession with two out, but were stranded by Spence.

Priddy walked with none out in the seventh to put the tying run on base and was sacrificed to second. The Nats got a break when Michaels fumbled Ferrell's grounder, and Pinch-Hitter Al Evans was summoned to bat for Scarborough. The to-be-feared double play developed when Evans grounded to Appling.

In the eighth, Buddy Lewis singled to left to put the tying run on base again with one out, but Appling again thwarted the Nats. He grabbed a low line drive off McBride's bat and doubled Lewis off first.

Priddy's single with two out in the ninth represented the Nats' last gasp. Christman forced him at second . . . The Nats were credited with 20 assists during the game, that abnormal number being accounted for in part by four assists on one play—a run-down of Hodgin between second and third in the eighth inning. Eddie Yost got some applause in the fifth inning with another of his special bare-handed pickups and throws on Tresh's bunt . . . Rudy York got a two-bagger in the fourth when Buddy Lewis and Stan Spence scared each other off his glorified pop fly . . . The Sox have now won 13 of 18 with the Nats this season . . . After an open date today, the Nats take on the Red Sox Tuesday night, Wednesday night and Thursday afternoon.

Jones Bids Tonight for 'Big Time'

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Johnny (Honeyboy) Bratton, of Chicago, who at 19 already has a man-sized reputation as a fighter, and Herbie (Biff) Jones, of Washington, also 19 and out to make a name for himself with his fists, tee off on each other at Griffith Stadium tonight.

The lightweight presentation, a Turner's Arena-Matchmaker Gabe Menendez offering, is listed for 10 rounds. The promoters, ever the optimists, are talking in terms of 10,000 clients and a $25,000 house, but the best guess is that around 5000 will visit Mr. Griffith's lawn for the party.

Bratton, son of a Chicago preacher who has never seen him fight, is the sixth-ranking lightweight and has been established a 2-1 choice to return to his midwestern surroundings with his reputation enhanced a few notches.

This is the Biffer's first brush with major league opposition and Bratton is regarded as having too much on the ball for the dead-serious local southpaw.

Tonight's scrambling will be the first since June 6 for Bratton, who on that date had his victory string of 10 straight spoiled by Gene Burton, a full-fledged welterweight.

Before Burton put the brakes on him, the flashy-dressing, classy-fighting Honeyboy was compiling an imposing record with triumphs over Willie Joyce, Danny Kapilow, Freddie Dawson, Morris Reif and other top contestants.

He's the biggest gate attraction Chicago promoters have been blessed with in years. The Honeyboy has already accumulated over $50,000 for less than two years of campaigning. Most of it is stashed away in annuities and insurance, but he kept enough on hand to purchasea $5100 cream-colored convertible—one of the four cars he owns—in which he dashes around the country. This plus a wardrobe which is the envy of every boulevardier.

The weights will be 133 for Jones and 135 for Bratton. Elsewhere, except for height, the measurements are close, too.

A portion of tonight's receipts will be turned over to the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund.

The supporting card is headed by an eight-rounder sending Ken Stribling against K.O. Williams of Baltimore. Two five-round light-

Yanks Beat Tribe, 5 to 4; Reynolds' 13th

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—Larry (Yogi) Berra's long fly ball to center field with the bases loaded in the ninth scored Bobby Brown from third base with a run that enabled the New York Yankees to shade the Cleveland Indians, 5-4, in a single game today. Allie Reynolds, former Indian, went the route for the Yanks to gain his thirteenth win of the year.

Bryan Stephens, who relieved Don Black in the opening round when the Yankees collected four runs, was charged with the defeat after giving up but four hits and pitching 5 2/3 innings of hitless ball.

The Yankees batted around in the first to garner four runs on three singles, two passes and a double by Berra.

Joe Gordon's nineteenth homer with one on and George Metkovich's fourth circuit clout accounted for three of the Indian's runs.

Ken Keltner's single scored Les Fleming to tie up at four-all in the sixth.

Tigers Crush Red Sox, 10-3

Boston, Aug. 3 (AP).—Clubbing five Boston pitchers for 16 hits, the Detroit Tigers today trounced the Red Sox, 10-3, before a paid audience of 24,565, who made the total Fenway Park attendance for the year to date 1,004,807 at 49 games on 42 dates.

The victory was the eleventh of the year for Lefty Hal Newhouser who was aided by a two-run homer by Hoot Evers. Evers also batted in two other runs. George Kell, Tiger third sacker, got four hits in five trips to bat.

The second-place Red Sox now trail the leading New York Yankees by 13½ games and are only a half game ahead of the third-rung Tigers.

Eddie Mayo, Tiger second sacker who had hit in his last 20 games, was unable to knock out a safety today, being robbed on his last trip in the ninth when Ted Williams grabbed his short fly near the ground after a hard run.

Haas, Ferrier Tie in Golf; Worsham 3d

St. Paul, Minn., Aug 3 (AP).—A pair of long putts that resulted in eagle threes on the last hole of the Keller Course threw Jim Ferrier of Chicago and Fred Haas, jr. of New Orleans into a tie with 272 totals at the end of the final round of play of the St. Paul Open Golf Tournament today.

Ferrier and Haas will meet Monday in an 18-hole playoff, starting at 1 p. m. (CST) to determine winner of the $2000 first prize money. Second money of $1400 will go to the loser of the match, which will be a "sudden death" playoff if the men are tied at the end of 18 holes.

Ferrier had to roar over the second nine holes to turn in a four-under par 33, giving him a 66, six strokes under par of 72, in today's round to gain the tie with Haas in the 72-hole tournament. Ferrier started the day's play with a 206 total, Haas started off with a 203 and carded a 69.

Haas who reported in first, was so pleased with his total that he rolled on the 18th green after dropping a 15-foot putt.

When Ferrier canned his 18-foot putt on the 18th 45 minutes later, he grabbed his ball and tossed it into the crowd. A spectator had told Ferrier he needed the eagle to tie.

Lew Worsham of Washington, who led with a 202 as they started today's round took third money of 1000 with his 274. He carded a par 72 today.

Two strokes behind him was John Barnum of Chicago, who was low amateur with a 68 for a 276 total.

Bobby Locke, the Johannesburg, South Africa, professional and leading money winner of the summer professional circuit, shot a 71 today for a 283 total, giving him a tie for 17th place with Dr Cary Middlecoff of Memphis, Tenn. They split $280.

Finishing two strokes behind Barnum at 278 were Henry Ransom of Ravinia, Ill., who fired a 69 today and "skip" Alexander of Lexington, N. C., who had a 68.

Ed Furgol, Pontiac, Mich., and Glenn Teal, Jacksonville, Fla., each had 71s today for 279 totals Ky Laffoon of St. Andrews, Ill., had a 71 for 280. Tied behind him at 281 were George Payton, Hampton, Va., who had a 69, Jim Milward, Madison, Wis., who had 71 in the last round, and Tony Penna of Cincinnati who had a 72.

Alexandria Boys Win Virginia American Legion Title, 4-3

Salem, Va., Aug. 3.—Alexandria, Va., won the State American Legion championship here this afternoon, nosing out Roanoke in the thrill-packed finale, 4 to 3.

It was the Alexandrians third straight victory in the tournament and earned them the right to compete in the Region Four eliminations to be played at Kannapolis, N. C., starting August 10. State champions from Virinia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee will play.

Righthander Willie Zehring pitched and batted the Alexandrians to their victory, driving across two runs in scoring his second win of the tournament.

Alexandria defeated Fredericksburgh in the first round and blanked Roanoke, 8-0, behind the two-hit pitching of Pavone Saturday night in the double-elimination meet to reach the final round. Pavone fanned seven.

Hopewell handed Fredericksburg its second straight loss today, 10-5, but was in turn eliminated by Roanoke, 3-0, in the semifinal contest.

Second Baseman Johnny Edmonds saved the day for the Alexandrians against Roanoke when he made a leaping catch of a line drive at second base with three men on in the eighth.

Third Baseman Ralph Brown got three singles to pace the victors, but Pitcher Zehring and Rightfielder Gene Fleming struck the timely blows. Fleming whacked a two-run single in the first and Zehring singled in the third Alexandria run in the fourth. After Roanoke had tied the score in the fifth, Zehring drove in Brown with an infield out in the sixth.

Segura, former U. S. Dudley to Play With Detroit Lions

Contract Calls For $20,000

Bill Dudley's reentry into professional football with the Detroit Lions will take place this week, probably Tuesday, The Washington Post learned last night.

Dudley has agreed to accept a Lion contract which will give him a $5000 bonus for signing and $20,000 for the 1947 season, Captain Norton Pritchett, director of athletics at the University of Virginia, told The Post last night.

The 1941 Virginia all-American backfield whiz "quit" the Pittsburgh Settlers last winter to return to his alma mater as backfield coach.

To obtain his services, Lion Owner Freddie Mandel, jr. will pay the Steelers a sum estimated at $20,000 plus several ballplayers.

Steeler Coach Jock Sutherland only recently gave the Lions permission to deal with Dudley.

Dudley's contract will be for one year with the Lions. The contract will also include a provision for Dudley to become assistant coach of the Lions when he feels his playing days are over. This job will play $8000, almost double the amount he receives at Virginia as backfield coach.

"Bill told me the other night that he would accept the Detroit offer," Captain Pritchett told The Washington Post. "While we regret very much losing Bill, we feel that this offer is too compelling for him not to accept."

Twice voted the National League's most valuable player, Dudley quit the Pittsburgh team last winter because "I can't stand

Steelers to Get $20,000 for Him to take that punishment any longer."

Bill was the wheelhorse of Doc Sutherland's single wing formation and was also the team's bulwark defensively. With the Lions, however, he will play the "T" formation under Coach Gus Dorais. It was under this system under Frank Murray, now at Marquette, that Dudley blossomed into stardom at Virginia.

Dudley's successor at the University of Virginia will probably be Eddie (Flash) Bryant, a teammate of his with the Cavaliers in 1941. Bryant is now head coach at Staunton Military Academy and will become Coach Art Guepe's assistant at Virginia if the military academy releases him.

Sturges Loses

Lausanne, Switzerland, Aug. 3 (AP).—Gianni Cucelli of Italy today won the men's singles title of the Swiss International Tennis Championships by defeating Eric Sturgess, South African Davis Cup player, 6—4, 4—6, 7—5, 6—4.

$200,000 Gate Expected for Bout Tonight

By Sid Feder

Philadelphia, Aug. 3 (AP).—Bobcat Bob Montgomery and Ike Williams, a couple of guys with a grudge, get together tomorrow night to untangle the lightweight title pretzel, and the local folks are looking for the biggest ear-scrambling party since Dempsey and Tunny hit town.

That would be just 21 years ago, come September, when 120,757 boys and girls didn't know enough—and didn't care—to come in out of the rain. They chipped in to a pot of $1,895,723 to see the Manassa Mauler's reign end.

Bobcat Bob and Jersey Ike are colliding in the same ballyard—the Philadelphia Municipal Stadium—and they know they can't make the same numbers at the gate. But they're shooting at the 40,407 turnout and $222,729 take for the Joe Louis-Al Ettore fight in '36.

$200,000 Expected

Right now Promoter Herman Taylor, who is putting on the show along with the Philadelphia Inquirer charities, is guessing at 40,000 customers and $200,000 in the till. If the weather causes a delay, the party will be held Tuesday night.

The lightweight title muddle is, of course, the same one that Sammy Angott twisted up when he announced his "last-and-final-but-not-positively" retirement back in 1942. The National Boxing Association and the New York Commission split over what to do, and ever since, there've been two lightweight champions blooming where one bloomed before.

Bobcat Bob won two out of three over Beau Jack in '43 and '44 to get the blessing of the New York and Pennsylvania fistic fathers as top man. Angott came back to take the NBA half again, and then lose it to Juan Zurita. Then Jersey Ike went down to Mexico and took it away from Juan.

Bob Won Before

Bob and Ike have met once before, back in January of 1944. Bob caved the roof in on the Trenton thumper in a dozen rounds. Since then, the two Negro clouters have had a good hot mad on.

In spite of Montgomery's job in their last tangle, the local betting shoppes have installed Williams as a 2-to-3 favorite. If you like Bob, you can get 7 to 5 for your money. If you want Ike, you lay 8 to get back 5.

Since winning his slice of the crown, Montgomery has lost to Nick Moran and been knocked out by Wesley Mouzon in nontitle bouts. But when the crown was on the line, he flattened both Allie Stolz and Mouzon to hang onto it.

What's more, he has the one style that figures to put the cork in Ike's free-wheeling style of walloping. He crowds in close and flails away, and that should tend to cause some unhappiness, to say the least, for Ike, who has developed into a knocker-outer and who likes lots of swinging room to pull the string on his high, hard one.

Burrows Takes State Net Title

Richmond, Va., Aug. 3 (AP).—Hal Burrows of Charlottesville and the University of Virginia came from behind to defeat Robert Doll of Tampa, Fla., and William and Mary, 8—6, 6—3, 6—3, 6—2, for the Virginia State Tennis Championship today.

Burrows, defending his 1946 title, had it pretty much his own way after the second set when Doll, obviously tiring, failed to keep up the swift returns and perfect placements that had won him the first.

Earlier Sidney Elliott of Charlottesville took the women's title with a 6—4, 8—6, win over Mrs. William Whipple of Richmond.

Doris Hart Loss In Swiss Tennis

Lausanne, Switzerland, Aug. 3 (AP).—Mrs. Sheila Summers of South Africa scored her second straight upset over an American foe by defeating Doris Hart of Miami, Fla., 6—3, 2—6, 6—2, today to win the women's title in the Swiss International Tennis Championships.

Mrs. Summers advanced to the final yesterday when Mrs. Pat Canning Todd, fourth-ranking United States player from Hidden Valley, Calif., defaulted because of the heat. The South African blonde was in front at the time, 6—4, 8—7.

Japs May Start Dog Racing

Tokyo, Aug. (AP).—Dog racing may come to Japan soon for the first time in history.

The Tokyo municipal assembly, seeking new tax sources, will consider a dog-racing measure next month. The tax income would be used to finance schools.

Food Angle 'Ridiculous,' British Say

By Jack Tait
Copyright, 1947, New York Herald Tribune, Inc.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Suggestions in the United States that American athletes should not compete in the Olympic games in London next summer since they are so well fed, was greeted by astonishment, laughter and general condemnation by sports authorities here today.

The fact that American competitors are probably the best nourished in the world should have nothing whatsoever to do with their participation in the next Olympics, it was agreed here.

"Stupid," "silly," and "ridiculous" were some of the London replies to suggestions that American entrants should stay home.

The British public has accepted with stolidity, the series of defeats handed its favories by American athletes. Most sports writers long ago gave up fashioning alibis for these defeats. The food deficiency here has been brought forward less and less as an excuse.

THIS is particularly true since competitors from such food-scarce countries as Holland, France, Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia, have been engaged here and in many instances with British boys.

Four Hungarians came here recently and competed in British track championships. They took home four titles.

There is little doubt but that most Britons would be offended—almost insulted—if American participants in the games were kept home because they believed that they were more or less undermatched. The British are always emphasizing that they play any game for the fun of playing rather than just to win.

To have it blatantly hurled at them that the Americans won't play because they're too well fed, and would be taking advantage of the opposition, is virtually an insult as far as the British are concerned.

HERE are some of the comments from sports authorities of leading London newspapers:

DAILY EXPRESS — "The suggestions are ridiculous. That's all, just ridiculous."

DAILY MAIL—"It would be a very bad thing for the games if the Americans didn't come over. It would be the worst thing the Americans could do."

DAILY HERALD—"It's a lot of poppy cock. Our British public has no feeling that way. They would feel that the games would be a flop without the Americans. In fact, there just couldn't be any games without them. They'll probably win most every event but still it would be dull without them. It's the silliest suggestion we ever heard of."

DAILY MIRROR — "We've never heard of any such suggestions being made from this end. It's very stupid and unsportsmanlike. Our one reaction is: Laughter.

Boudreau Protests Calling of Game

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—Cleveland Manager Lou Boudreau disclosed today that he had protested the calling of yesterday's second game with the New York Yankees after 7½ innings. The Yanks won the game, 3-0, when the game was called by the umpires because of darkness. Boudreau said he thought the contest could have gone the full distance.

The Tribe pilot informed Club President Bill Veeck by telephone and the latter then notified American League President Will Harridge.

What's a Mere 22 Games Behind?

Nats fans shouldn't be discouraged by the fact that their heroes are trailing the New York Yankees by a mere 22 games. Things could be a lot worse. For instance, the fans supporting the Fort Lauderdale team in the Florida International League are really bad off. Their team trails the league leaders by 51½ games. And Clovis, in the West Texas-New Mexico circuit, is 47½ games in arrears. Another whiz-bang club, Grand Forks of the Northern loop, is only 44½ contests back. Maybe the Nats aren't doing so bad after all.

Hank Hits 3 Homers, Pirates Lose and Tie

Braves Drop Reds, 4-2, Then Lose, 6-1

Cincinnati, Aug. 3 (AP).—Roston and Cincinnati split a double-header under a broiling sun here today, the Braves taking the opener, 4-2, to snap Ewell Blackwell's string of consecutive complete games pitched at 13, while the Reds won the second game, 6-1, before 26,184 sweltering fans.

The heat forced the big Cincinnati righthander to leave the game after pitching six innings. The loss was the fourth and second in a fow for Blackwell, who has won 18.

The last time Blackwell failed to finish a game was on June 1 when an aching elbow forced him to quit after seven innings against the New York Giants, and Harry Gumbert relieved him to get credit for the 5-3 victory.

Giants Beat Bucs, 11-8, Second Tied

Pittsburgh, Aug. 3 (AP).—Hank Greenberg's third home run of the day and his second of the game, smashed out in the eighth inning of the nightcap, gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a 6-6 tie with the New York Giants today after the Giants won the first game, 11-8.

The second contest was called because of Pennsylvania's Sunday curfew law.

The Giants, scoring five runs in a big fourth inning, easily defeated the Pirates in the first game.

Three Pirate homers, including one with the sacks loaded, by Greenberg, kept in Bucs within striking distance but they were unable to overcome the visitors' lead.

Macks Get 3 Hits, Win, 2-0 Then Lose to St. Louis, 4-3

Philadelphia, Aug. 3 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns overcame a three-run deficit in the late innings today to win the second game of a double-header with the Philadelphia Athletics, 4 to 3, and gain an even split with the A's who won the opener, 2 to 0.

Fidgety Phil Marchildon gained his thirteenth victory of the season, shutting out the Browns with eight hits in the opener before 20,000 fans at Shibe Park. Eddie Joost's ninth home run of the season proved the payoff punch for the Mackmen who were able to get only three hits off the right-handed slants of Ellis Kinder.

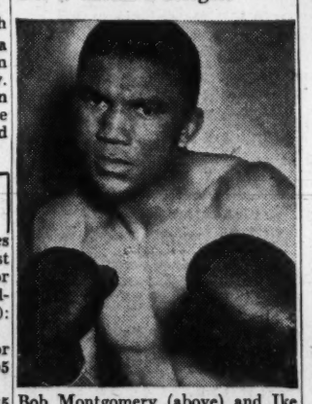
Championship Bout
On WMAL Tonight



Bob Montgomery (above) and Ike Williams will reduce two fistic titles to one tonight in Philadelphia. The winner of their fifteen-round clash will be undisputed lightweight champion.

Bobcat Bob won the world's 135-lb. crown from Beau Jack in 1943 but subsequently dropped it back to the Beau. He regained it several months later. Williams annexed the NBA title by stopping Juan Zurita at Mexico City two years ago.

Over the years the two sluggers have built up a bitter personal feud. Tonight's battle is their second ring meeting. The first ended in a kayo triumph for Montgomery. Since the boys are about evenly matched for the title shot, the sock-loving trade looks for a dynamitin' bee.

Enjoy the excitement, blow-by-blow, on Gillette's Cavalcade of Sports over American Broadcasting Co. and WMAL (630 on your dial) at 10 p.m.

And remember, men . . . LOOK sharp! FEEL sharp! BE sharp! Use Gillette Blue Blades with the sharpest edges ever honed!

Drobny Routs Tom Brown

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Aug. 3 (AP).—Jaroslav Drobny, Czech Davis Cup ace, trounced Tom Brown of San Francisco, 6—2, 6—2, 6—1, to win Czechoslovakia's International Tennis Tournament today.

The 24-year-old Brown, tenth ranking player of the U. S. and a finalist in the recent Wimbledon tourney, never had a chance today. Drobny, rated the best played in Europe today, commanded the court with his fireball service and trick placement shots.

Cubs Coach Leaves For Grid Giants' Drills

Bullpen coach of the Chicago Cubs during the baseball season, Smith also serves as assistant football coach to Steve Owens and the New York Giants. Smith departed tonight for Superior, Wis., where the Giants begin training tomorrow for their National Football League season.

D. C. All-Stars Drub Brooklyn

The Boys Club of Washington All-Stars drubbed the Brooklyn Navy Yard Boys Club, 14-5, at Ebbets Field to sweep the home and home series between the teams.

Three pitchers, Lou Negri, Bob Hooker and Chuck Stover, limited the Brooklynites to two hits. Following the game, Washington received a trophy for its pair of triumphs and Jack Malarkey of Washington was awarded a trophy as the game's outstanding player.

Fight on Beetles at Height In Five Maryland Counties

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Once Maryland farmers dismissed Japanese beetle damage with a shrug of the shoulders.

But in recent years—and particularly this year—the farmers have realized that when the beetles start buzzing into their fields the product of their year's efforts may be laid waste in a few days.

Last year in Montgomery County, the pests caused a quarter of a million dollars worth of damage. The County Farm Bureau, County Agent O. W. Anderson and the State Experiment Station at the University of Maryland urged agriculturists to take broad precautionary measures.

Last year and this year, 9000 beetle traps were leased out at small fees. In prewar days, the traps were very popular with farmers, but now that the cost of farm labor, required to empty the traps, has jumped, few farmers use them.

Suburban residents, though, have snapped up every available trap, so that now Anderson's office has a large sign reading "No More Beetle Traps."

The traps, baited with a mixture of geraniol and eugenol, often fail to achieve maximum effectiveness because of their placement, according to Dr. George Langford, specialist in insect control at the State Experiment Station.

Dr. Langford, known as the "top beetle killer in Maryland," says that many of the 50,000 traps distributed throughout the Free State are placed in the shade and near shrubbery or crops not attractive to the beetles.

He recommended the following precautions for suburban home owners:

1. Keep foliage sprayed with DDT solution (one pound to 100 gallons of water is a recommended ratio). Spraying three times between June 15 and August 15 should be sufficient.

2. Erect traps in sunlight, close to plants and trees, since the beetle is a sun worshiper.

As for farmers, Dr. Langford recommends:

1. Plant soybeans around the outer edge of crops in a 3-foot strip. Then soak them with DDT solution and watch for beetles. If they reappear, spray the plants again. The beetles prefer soybeans to other crops and will be halted at the field's outer line in this way.

2. Spray fields with a beetle-killing solution or powder. The exact formula is hard to recommend since it is dependent on the wind velocity, type of spraying equipment being used, and other factors.

The president of the Southern Maryland Farm Bureau, H. G. Townshend, said sprayer trucks are now weaving through fields in St. Marys, Calvert, Prince Georges, Charles and Anne Arundel Counties in a desperate attempt to save crops in which beetles have established a foothold.

He said that because of the lack of precautionary measures as much as 50 per cent of the early corn crop of the area may be lost. Some farmers have contracted for airplane crop-dusting, a relatively expensive process, which is limited to windless days.

sweeter words were never said..... "with Gold this ring I thee wed"

● "Something new, something old" . . . and the Ring from Schwartz is made of Gold. Happy words . . . happy days . . . and a world of happiness to both! He's the Luckiest Man in Town . . . because he's won the Loveliest Girl in The World. And she's lucky, too . . . lucky in love . . . and in the romance of her wedding day.

● But right now her eye's on the Gold Wedding Band. Like generations of brides before her, she selected it at Schwartz, of course. Simple, rich, in the finest of taste . . . it lives up to the best in the Schwartz Gold Tradition. She will cherish it for a lifetime.

● And because this is their Golden Moment, what better way to enshrine it in both their hearts than with a double token of two Gold rings from Schwartz . . . one for her and one for him? For every important occasion, Gold has a symbolism . . . a meaning . . . all its own. Its enduring beauty lasts throughout the years, recapturing the happiness and joy of romance and of youth.

● As the years go by, she will add to his Gold Collection from Schwartz . . . with Gold cuff links, a Gold pocket clip, a Gold pen and pencil set, Gold tie holder, or a Gold cigarette lighter. Gold earrings, a Gold compact, a Gold clip, or Gold bracelets . . . to mention but a few of the hundreds of Schwartz Golden Gift ideas.

● It's all in the Schwartz tradition. Newlyweds . . . sweethearts . . . or 50 years wed . . . they all know that the way to remember life's Golden Moments is with a Golden Gift from Schwartz . . . a Great Name in Jewelry in the Nation's capital.

5000 to 8000 More Layoffs Due in VA

VA: A wide-scale realignment of activities and employes of the Veterans Administration will take place within the next few months. This is in the cards:

1. A "substantial" layoff of administrative employes. Over the weekend VA officials were trying to decide how many must be dropped. The best estimate at this time is between 5000 and 8000 the country over. Several hundred would be in this city.

2. The layoff of administrative people, however, would be offset somewhat by an increase in the staff of the hospital and medical division. This division has funds to hire several thousand additional people, mainly doctors, nurses, attendants, etc.

3. The transfer here from New York around the end of this year of additional insurance offices. It had been planned to move only the actuarial division which has 1500 jobs. But now VA has tentative plans to bring back additional offices to total about 2500 jobs. Less than 1000 people in those jobs in New York can be expected to transfer here. That would throw open an additional 1500 or so jobs for laid-off employes in this city. Meantime, Public Buildings is at work trying to find additional space to house the 2500-man insurance staff.

The administrative layoff will be forced by budget cuts voted by Congress. A top VA official yesterday said the layoff would be made "very soon." This is the budget picture:

In voting a VA budget, the House cut out 27 million dollars to pay the salaries of 10,000 employes. But as finally approved, the Congress restored 20 million dollars of the slash, but it specifically earmarked the 20 million dollars to pay the salaries of additional employes in the hospital and medical division.

So, a sizable layoff must be made in the administrative staff in addition to the 6000 reduction now under way.

Meantime, the VA regional office at 1825 H st. nw. is in need of a few CAF-3 stenographers. Apply to Room 918 at that address.

GSI: Government Services, Inc., is headed for a shake-up. Capt. Frank Hoover, its general manager, has submitted his resignation to its board of directors. A committee of the board is working on a reorganization plan which would meet some of the criticisms leveled at the operators of Government cafeterias by the Senate Civil Service Committee.

ARLINGTON: Federal workers who live in Arlington County can get two hours off tomorrow to vote in its primary election. And by the way, this local election is exempt from the Hatch Act. In other words, Federal workers who live and vote in the county are free to politick.

INTERIOR will cancel a few layoff notices to employes in its General Land Office. The worst of the Interior layoffs are over. Any new dismissals will be scattered.

CIVIL SERVICE soon will announce a competitive test for oceanographer jobs to pay from $3397 to $9975 to start. Navy and Coast and Geodetic Survey have openings . . . The commission will still accept applications for messenger from applicants who have veterans preference. More than 11,000 people have applied so far . . . The 600 applicants for radio engineer jobs in Federal Communications will be examined tomorrow.

AGRICULTURE: A new unit will be set up to administer marketing research in this department. Congress gave the department nine million dollars to carry out the recently approved Hope-Flannagan Act to provide for marketing research, a new appropriation.

Most of the money will go to the States for research work. But three Agriculture agencies also are slated to each get a piece of the money. They are the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Agricultural Research Administration and Production and Marketing Administration.

LAW: The President has signed that bill into law to raise the salaries of 45 Army and Navy civilian scientists from $10,000 to $15,000 a year. Several scientists here will be among those benefited.

CAPITOL: Fifteen new policemen are being added to the Capitol Hill force. The basic salary is $2000, plus overtime pay.

WAR: It will continue its Remount Service on a scaled-down basis. Congress gave it $50,000 to carry on the training of horses until a decision can be made on how to dispose of the service. Agriculture is slated to get it.

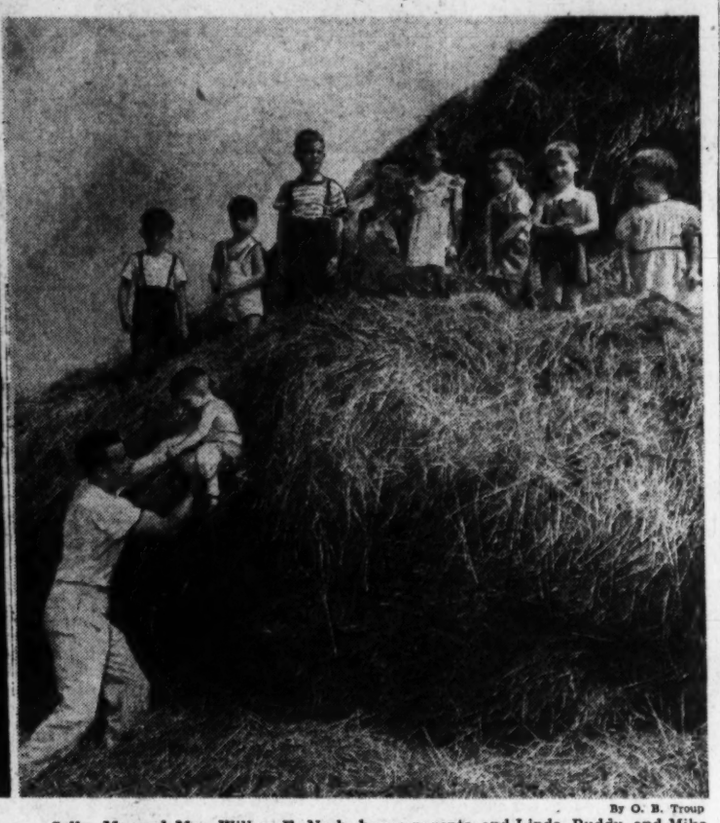
JONES ACT: The first batch of refunds paid to former Federal workers has averaged more than $800. Civil Service officials estimate the average will be close to $1000.

And here are two overlooked provisions of that law to permit former employes with between 5 and 10 years of service to withdraw their money from the Civil Service retirement system:

1. Civilian service is counted only. Military service definitely is not counted in the 10-year limit, and,

2. The law is retroactive to January 24, 1942.

Greater Washington Discovers Delights of Area's Youth Hostel



By O. B. Troup

HOW TO SPEND A WEEKEND—Five greater Washington families have discovered for themselves the delights of the Potomac Area Youth Hostels, a Community Chest agency, located on the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Nash at Brookeville, Md. Above, at left, Mr. and Mrs. Pierce Gault and their daughter Sally, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Nash, house parents, and Linda, Buddy, and Mike Avensena of 3297 M st. nw., Freddy Koch, 4607 Calvert rd. and Skipper Hiltz, 7302 Rhode Island ave., College Park, on farm horse "Jeff." Md. Gets LCT's To Haul Oysters

Two landing ships built to carry tanks for wartime invasions will be turned over to the Maryland Tidewater Fisheries Commission tomorrow, Senator Herbert R. O'Conor announced yesterday.

The Democratic Senator said the Navy had agreed to his request to give the ships to Maryland for use in transferring and planting oysters in Chesapeake Bay.

Representatives of the Maryland commission are expected to take over the vessels at Norfolk, Va.

Byrd Party to Be Held, Apples or No Apples

Winchester, Va., Aug. 3 (AP).—Senator Harry F. Byrd's annual apple party will be held as usual this year—rain or shine, apples or no apples.

Officials at the Senator's office here said today the picnic for Virginia's orchardmen will be held Saturday, August 30, at "Rosemant," the Byrd estate on the outskirts of Berryville in Clarke County. The local district is expected to harvest its shortest apple crop in recent years as a result of early May freezes.

Exhibit Fee Protested

Frederick, Md., Aug. 3.—Protesting that a proposed charge for space to exhibit agricultural machinery at the Frederick Fair "unfair," representatives of the Central Maryland Farm Equipment Association are threatening a boycott of the annual exhibition here September 30 to October 3.

The Farm Equipment Association represents approximately 50 dealers in Frederick, Montgomery, Carroll and Howard counties.

The association takes the stand, spokesmen said, that inasmuch as the dealers bear the entire expense of a fair exhibit, they should not be charged for exhibition space. Members of the board of andria city attorney since September, 1941, and has served at various times as substitute police justice, assistant to the Commonwealth's attorney, member of the city planning commission, and United States Commissioner for Alexandria.

Budwesky also took sharp issue yesterday with a city council statement that he resigned last Friday after he had been asked to do so by a two-man committee from the council.

He admitted the committee had called on him before he announced his intention to quit, but declared his letter of resignation had already been prepared, and that he informed the committee he was not interested in further discussion.

Budwesky said he had made up his mind to resign "from the moment I read council's resolution ordering me to issue to full and satisfactory report on the resignations of the police and fire chiefs by August 11 or else tender my own resignation."

Council adopted the resolution during Budwesky's absence on July 26, when it met to discuss resignations of Police Chief John S. Arnold and Fire Chief James M. Duncan, jr. Both attributed their resignation to "administrative interference by the council."

Eorlier, Col. Edward B. Markham, assistant city engineer and head of the sanitation department, resigned due to "lack of cooperation from city officials."

At about the same time, it was learned that Dr. W. Lewis Schafer, city health officer, had threatened to resign October 1 unless council meets his demands for additional health department facilities.

Boys Forum Relaxes Quest For Political Lore, Visits Tomb

Members of the Boys Forum of National Government, here under American Legion sponsorship to study the operation of the Federal Government, eased up a bit yesterday in their quest for political lore.

The 103 boys, who represent every State and the District of Columbia, visited Arlington National Cemetery in the afternoon and placed a wreath at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. They also visited Mount Vernon.

Their only governmental activity in the third day of a week's session here was brief political conventions preliminary to tomorrow's election of group officers.

The forum will be busy tomorrow, however. Lectures by Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannon, Attorney General Tom Clark and Commerce Secretary W. Averell Harriman have been scheduled.

Tomorrow night the boys will learn how the Nation's Capital is covered by the press and radio at a dinner at the National Press Club.

Speakers there will be Relman Morin, chief of the AP bureau here; G. B. Parker of the Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance, Earl Godwin, ABC commentator, and Richard Harkness, NBC commentator. A question-and-answer session will follow.

Poolesville Stock Show Opens Saturday

The seventh annual Poolesville Livestock Stock Show sponsored by the Poolesville Chapter, Future Farmers of America, will be held Saturday beginning at 10 a. m. at Poolesville High School.

Approximately $1500 in premiums is being offered to FFA and 4-H Club members. Animals must be on the grounds and registered by 9:30 a. m. DST. The show is supervised by William W. Miles, vocational agricultural teacher at the high school, and the community farmers and businessmen. In the event of rain, the show will be held Monday, August 11.

Paving Bids Open

Centreville, Md., Aug. 3 (AP).—Bids are being accepted by the town commissioners of Centreville for additional macadam paving on eight streets, subgrading and curb for a new street, and an 8-inch waterline on Liberty street. Shew and Bartlett, project engineers, will receive bids until 11 a. m. tomorrow.

Southern States Co-op to Meet At Sandy Spring

Annual membership meeting of Southern States Cooperative in the area served by the Brinklow and Olney agencies will be held tonight at 8:30 at Sherwood High School, Sandy pring, Md.

Approximately 300 farmers are expected to attend the meeting, which will include a business session and recreational features. A feed bag style show, directed by Mrs. J. J. Hutton, will be held for farm women.

Group singing will be led by Forest Beall, accompanied by Miss Delores Beall. The Rev. Russell Reed, pastor of Ashton Methodist Church, will give the invocation. Robert Miller of Spencerville will preside, and District Manager L. B. Baldwin of Baltimore will give the annual report. Agency managers W. J. Hines, Brinklow, and E. G. Armstrong, Olney, will report on local matters.

3 Die as Auto Hits Parked Cattle Truck

Charlottesville, Va. Aug. 3 (Spl.). Three persons were killed late last night when an automobile crashed into a parked cattle truck on Route 29, six miles north of here.

The dead: James Thomas, 55, Russell Cox, 19, and Eugene Pritchett, 18, all of Albemarle County.

A fourth person in the car, Charles Thomas, 19, also of Albemarle County, was critically injured and was reported near death tonight at the University of Virginia Hospital.

State Highway Trooper E. H. Thompson said the four were occupants of a Chevrolet coach which ploughed into the rear of a cattle-loaded truck, owned and operated by E. J. Mills of Culpeper.

The truck, Thompson said, had stopped for mechanical repairs and had lights burning and warning flares placed along the highway. The crash occurred near the Breezy Hill farm.

James Thomas, one of those killed, lived with his sister, Mrs. William Cox, on Rio rd. in northern Albemarle County. Five sisters and three brothers survive.

Pritchett, an employe of the Southern Railway, is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Pritchett, of near Barboursville, six sisters and five brothers.

Cox, a young farmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Cox, of Burnley's, is survived by his parents and four brothers. A double funeral service is being planned for Thomas and Cox.

Child's School to Open

Christ Episcopal Church, Rockville, Md., is inaugurating a nonsectarian private school for kindergarten and first-grade children. A meeting will be held at the parish hall tonight at 8 o'clock, or interested parents may call the rectory, Rockville 2884.

1000 Attend As Elks Open 27th Annual Convention

Over 2000 Are Due From 15 Md., Del., And D. C. Lodges; Election Tomorrow

The twenty-seventh annual convention of the Maryland, Delaware and District of Columbia Elks Association opened yesterday with a band concert, open house and dancing at the Elks Home, 919 H st. nw.

More than 1000 of an expected 2000 conventioneers from 15 lodges of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks in the District and the two States had registered by last night.

Highlight of today's program will be a memorial service for deceased members at 11 a. m., with Dr. Chandler M. Stith, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Baptist Conference, as principal speaker.

Also on today's program will be a business session at 10 a. m., an afternoon of shopping in Washington stores, and a moonlight cruise at 8 p. m. on the Potomac River.

R. Herbert Ricketts of Towson, Md., is association president. Officers for the coming year will be nominated and elected at a business session tomorrow morning.

L Martin Young, secretary of the Washington Lodge No. 15, said the convention, which will last through Wednesday night, is the first to be held in Washington in approximately 20 years.

Besides business sessions, the four-day program includes bowling contests, a golf tournament at Fairfax Country Club and the Washington-Boston baseball game tomorrow evening.

'River Rink' Burns At Urbanna, Va.; Blaze Routs Ten

The fire routed 10 persons from their living quarters on the second floor of the frame building, but all escaped without injuries.

The owners—Fred Connor and M. E., R. W. and E. D. Brooks—estimated damage at between $50,000 and $100,000.

The Middlesex County Volunteer Fire Department was called shortly after 3 a. m., when the fire was discovered, but the pumper failed to work. Volunteer firemen from the West Point Fire Department arrived a few moments later, however, and kept the flames from spreading.

Congress Seen Warning World About U. S. Aid

Senator Capper, (R., Kas.) said yesterday Congress has "served notice on the administration and, I hope, on the world that the time is coming when foreign nations' willingness and ability to help themselves will be considered in relation to future aid from America."

"That," he said in a statement prepared for radio broadcast in Kansas, "is a healthy indication, at least."

He added he believed there is coming to be a general realization in this country that "in the final analysis, the United States is going to have to be strong in its own right, rather than depend upon the United Nations or some nebulous one-world government."

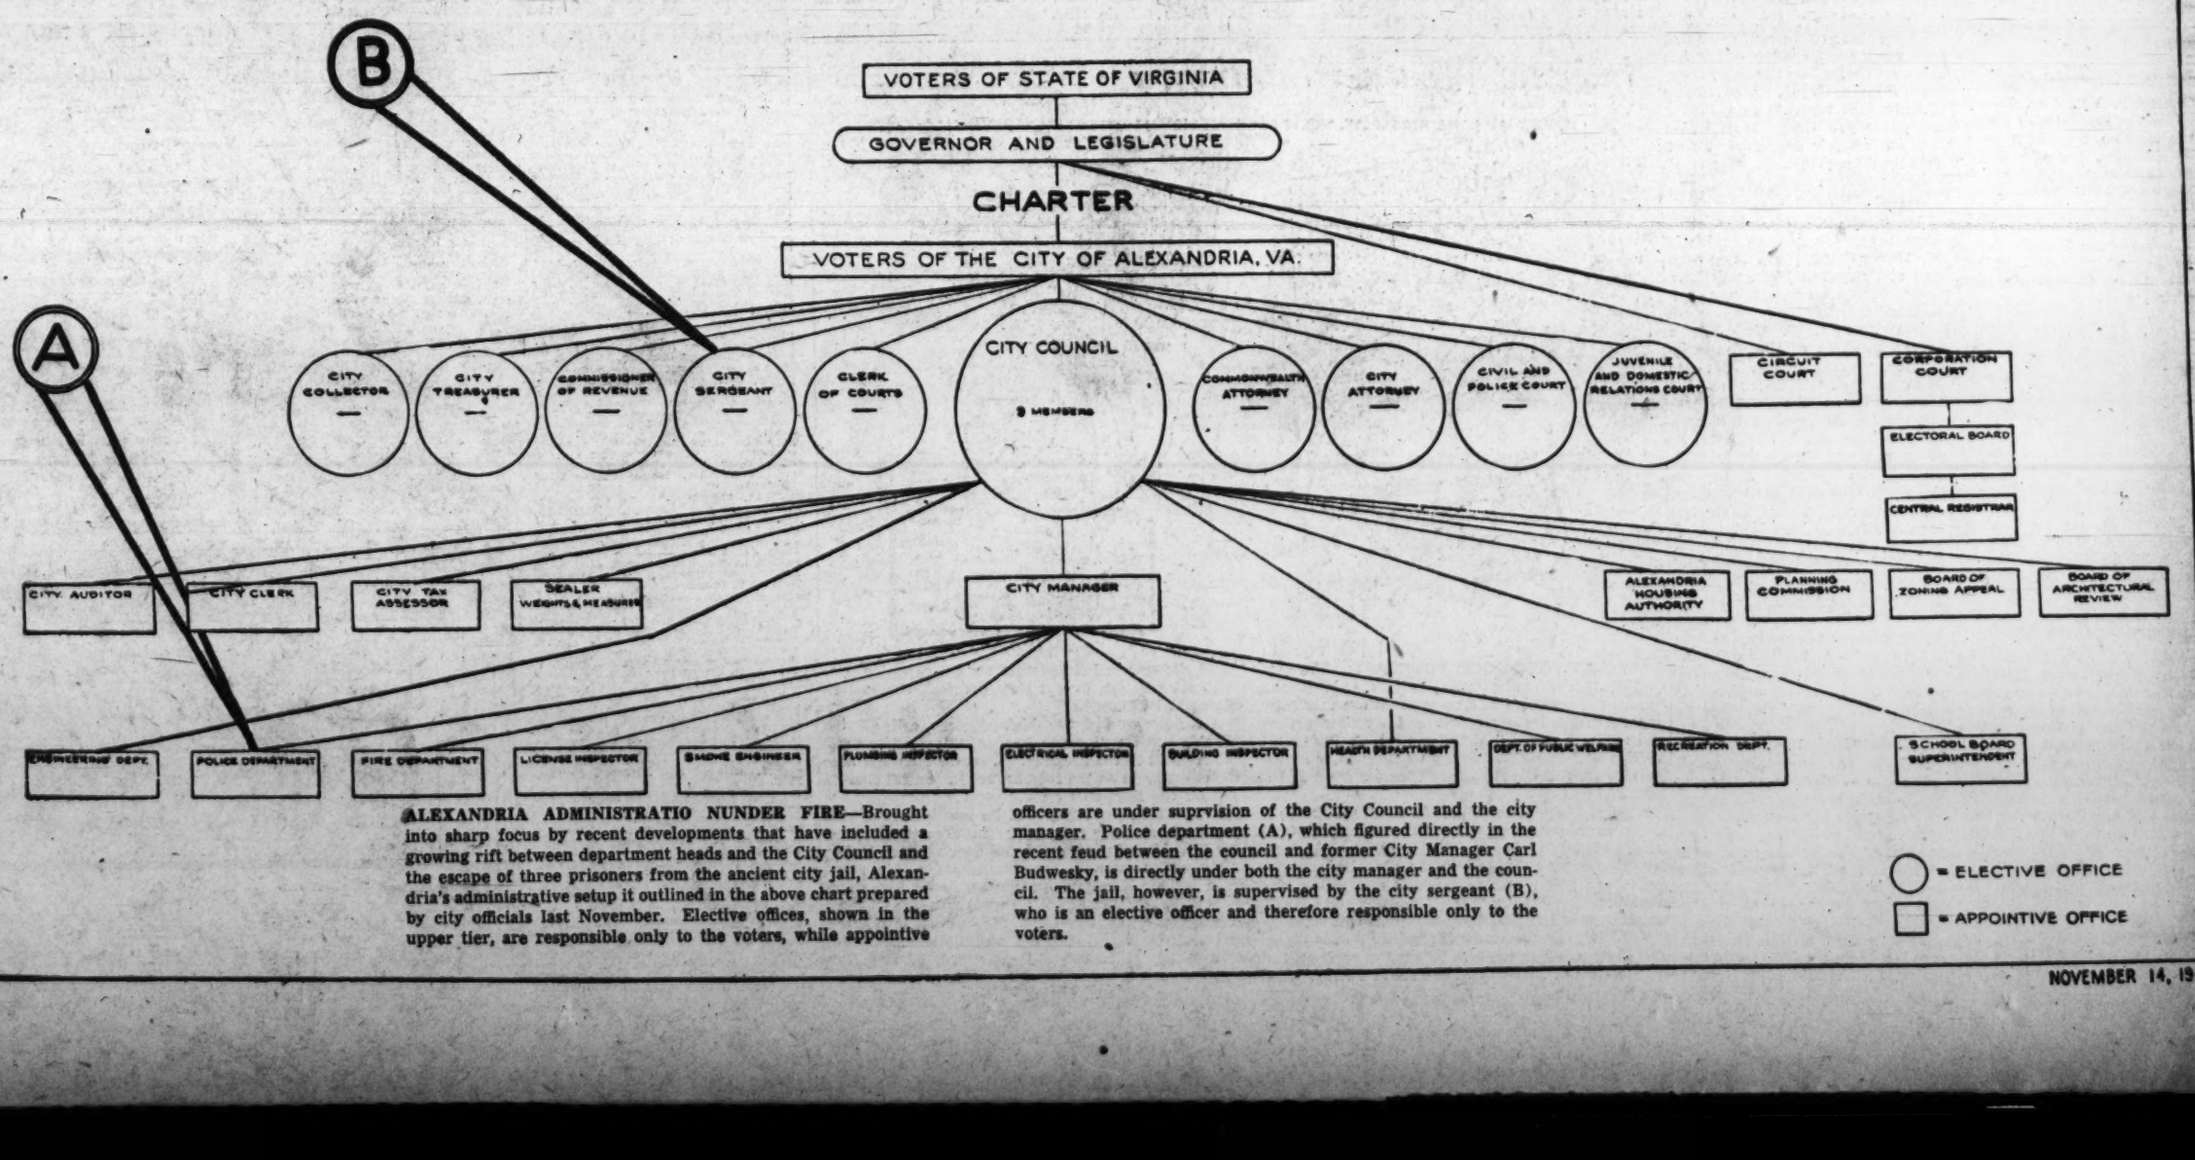
'Girls' Nation' Set By Legion Auxiliary

A "Girls' Nation," sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary, will be held here starting next Saturday and continue through August 14.

The assembly is part of the auxiliary's movement to train girls for citizenship. Representatives from 44 States are expected to attend.

Play by G. W. Students

Students of George Washington University will present a variety show for inmates of the Industrial Home School, 2453 Wisconsin ave. nw., Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. The program, first of a series of shows to be presented by university students in District penal institutions, is under the auspices of the D. C. Bureau of Rehabilitation.



ALEXANDRIA ADMINISTRATIO NUNDER FIRE—Brought into sharp focus by recent developments that have included a growing rift between department heads and the City Council and the escape of three prisoners from the ancient city jail, Alexandria's administrative setup it outlined in the above chart prepared by city officials last November. Elective offices, shown in the upper tier, are responsible only to the voters, while appointive officers are under suprvision of the City Council and the city manager. Police department (A), which figured directly in the recent feud between the council and former City Manager Carl Budwesky, is directly under both the city manager and the council. The jail, however, is supervised by the city sergeant (B), who is an elective officer and therefore responsible only to the voters.

In Maryland and Virginia

Toll Systems Show Big Travel Increase

Baltimore, Aug. 3 (AP).—Vacation travel throughout Maryland was reflected in increased use of three State toll systems last month, the State Roads Commission reported yesterday.

The Potomac River toll bridge carried 66,923 vehicles between Maryland and Virginia, 30 per cent more than in July 1946.

An increase of 8.38 per cent was clocked at the Susquehanna River bridge, and 14.9 per cent increase on the Chesapeake Bay ferry system. A total of 349,889 vehicles used the Susquehanna Bridge last month and 180,147 the Bay ferries.

Hearing Scheduled

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 3 (AP).—State's Attorney Walter Dawson of Garrett County said a preliminary hearing would be held tomorrow for James W. Hoover, 28, of Jennings, who has been detained in connection with the hit-and-run death of Elzie F. Layman, 40, of Shade Mills.

Layman was found fatally injured Wednesday night on Route 40, 6 miles west of Frostburg. He died Thursday morning at a Frostburg hospital.

Movies for Churches

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 3.—The use of motion pictures and other visual aids of communication by churches was urged by Prof. Samuel Madden of Virginia State College at the annual meeting yesterday of the Mattaponi District Baptist Church School convention at Mount Zion Baptist Church in Caroline County.

The sixty-second meeting of the convention was held jointly with the thirteenth annual Baptist Training Union conference. Beulah Baptist Church School was named as the banner unit for the past year. The group voted to meet at Sylvannah Baptist Church in Spotsylvania County next year.

Hog Sales Listed

Blacksburg, Va., Aug. 3 (AP).—First in a series of summer sales of registered hogs will be held by the Virginia Purebred Swine Breeders Association at Staunton, August 6, Secretary George C. Herring announced today.

Breeders from five counties have listed 48 Berkshire, Duroc, Hampshire, O. I. C., and Poland China hogs for the Staunton sale, Herring said.

Listed for a sale at Winchester, August 8, are 62 head, including some Hereford entries in addition to the breeds consigned for the Staunton sale. Bred sows, open gilts, and boars will be offered at both sales. Largest sale of the series will be at Suffolk, August 13, when 41 bred sows and 51 boars will be offered.

Child's Death Accidental

Winchester, Va., Aug. 3.—George Forman of Elkins, a bus driver for the Reynolds (W. Va.) Line, has been exonerated of any guilt in the highway death last Thursday of Theodore Alger, 8, who was fatally injured in front of his home at Hatfield.

Dr. J. R. Troxell ruled that death was accidental after hearing testimony from the driver, from State Trooper E. B. Mitchell, and an eyewitness, C. M. Triplett, who said the child ran out from behind a passing truck directly into the path of the bus.

Kiwanian Anniversary

Winchester, Va., Aug. 3.—The Winchester Kiwanis Club has been invited to the second anniversary of the Front Royal Club on August 13, by James Payne, president. The local club, which sponsored the Front Royal organization, also has its anniversary this month, the twenty-fifth, but will not celebrate the occasion until October, officers said.

Schools' Reopening Set

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 2.—The public schools of Spotsylvania County will reopen for the 1947-48 session on Monday, September 8, at 9 a. m., Superintendent C. Melvin Snow announced today. No preopening teachers' meetings are scheduled this year, but principals, supervisors and head teachers will hold a conference on a date yet to be fixed, Snow said.

Romance on Rise

Winchester, Va., Aug. 3.—Marriages across the country may be on the decline according to national statistics, but the postwar decline in romance apparently has not yet reached Winchester.

The city and county clerks' offices in Winchester report a total of 1113 marriage licenses issued during the first six months of 1947, an increase of 89 over the same period last year.

Carnival All Week

Manassas, Va., Aug. 3.—The annual carnival sponsored by the Manassas Volunteer Fire Department, which opened last night, will continue each evening this week through Saturday. The entertainment, held on the Osbourn High School athletic field, features rides, games and refreshments. The carnival committee, headed by J. A. Vetter, includes Raymond Davis, J. H. Stauff, Edwin Beachley, Sedrick Saunders, Harcourt Dickens and Shelman Holmes.

Campaigning Pays Off

Roanoke, Va., Aug. 3 (AP).—The 4-year-old daughter of Delegate Walter H. Scott, who is now campaigning for the post of State Senator from the city of Roanoke, has conceived a new method of financing a political campaign.

She found a package of her father's cards with his picture on them and told her mother she was going to give some to her friends. When she returned a few minutes later, she said, "Mother, I sold Daddy's pictures and made 12 cents."

Church Relief Sale

Manassas, Va., Aug. 3.—Plans are under way for a relief sale to be sponsored by the Prince William County Council of Churches at the Manassas livestock market on August 23. Churches of Fairfax, Loudoun and Fauquier Counties will also participate. The Rev. Conrad L. Snavely, pastor of the Cannon Branch Church of the Brethren, is general chairman of the sale.

Hogs Have Enteritis

Frederick, Md., Aug. 3.—Local veterinarians discounted today reports that recent deaths among hogs could be caused by insecticide sprayed on corn.

Enteritis, an inflammation of the small intestines, is responsible for most of the deaths among swine in Frederick County this summer, it was explained. The disease has not reached epidemic stage and there is no cause of widespread alarm, veterinarians stated. Cases reported thus far have in the Walkersville, Woodsboro, Frederick, Middletown and Ijamsville areas.

Fishing Club Buys Land

Charles Town, W. Va., Aug. 3.—The Jefferson County Chapter, Izaak Walton League, has paid $2500 for 54 acres of land near Leetown, this county, for location of a clubhouse and fishpond.

The tract, part of the Floyd Owens property, has an additional 50 acres on which the club also has an option. The land lies along the Leetown-Middleway road, near the former town.

Street Widening Planned

Frederick, Md., Aug. 3.—One of this city's worst traffic hazards, and the scene of numerous accidents, will be eliminated in the near future, City Engineer W. Raymond Walter announced yesterday. He said permission has been secured from the State Roads Commission to widen South Market street at the crest of the hill opposite Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Optimist Club Projects

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 3.—Creation of a junior police patrol, the staging of a second model airplane meet, and aid for the Temple Allen fund have been adopted as major projects by the Optimist Club here for the coming year. Allen is a 21-year-old local man who has been crippled since childhood. The model plane contest will be held August 24.

School Facilities Hit

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 3.—A State Department of Education survey committee has compiled a report terming Negro high school facilities in King George County "entirely inadequate" and calling for participation by the county in a cooperative high school system with Fredericksburg.

The committee proposed a city-county program for Fredericksburg and Stafford County or King George County schools, or both.

Mrs. Hickcock Is 104

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 3 (AP).—Allegany County's oldest resident, Mrs. Lydia H. Hickcock, celebrated her 104th birthday today with a party at her room in Memorial Hospital, where she has been a patient since November 7, 1945.

The centenarian was born in Cumberland and has spent most of her life here.

Pastor's Driver Held

Salisbury, Md., Aug. 3 (AP).—Marion Twilley, 22, has been placed under $500 bond for grand jury action on charges of stealing $186 from the Rev. James H. Bailey of Salisbury.

Twilley, who drove a truck for the minister, pleaded guilty to the charges at a preliminary hearing.

Engine to Be Bought

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 3.—The purchase of a new fire engine and equipment costing $7500 has been authorized by the town council of Bowling Green. The Caroline County seat recently organized a volunteer fire department, which will stage a fair September 1 to 6 to help raise funds.

Pastor Appointed

Leonardtown, Md., Aug. 3.—Members of the Lutheran faith in St. Marys County, and those who live at Lexington Park, will have their own church, it was announced today.

The Rev. A. S. Gedwillo, a recent graduate of the Concordia Seminary at St. Louis, Mo., has been made first pastor of the church. Rev. Gedwillo, now serving the St. Paul's Chapel Church at Charlotte Hall, also will be given a rectory near the church when it is constructed at Lexington Park. No date for beginning construction of the Church has been set.

Belchic Appointed

Winchester, Va., Aug. 3.—Ben Belchic, general manager of the Novick Transfer Co. here, has been appointed to the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce. He succeeds Steve Sammis, telephone executive, who was transferred to another city.

Red Cross Recruiting

Recruits for the staff assistance corps of the Prince Georges County (Md.) branch of the American Red Cross are needed.

The staff assistants wear the uniform of the Volunteer Special Service and aid in general office work of the Red Cross office in the County Service Building, Hyattsville, Md. Details may be obtained from Mrs. Miriam Baselaar, executive secretary of the county chapter, at Warfield 8720.

They Build Their Own Streets

Dr. Douglass Calls for End Of 'Cold War,' Militant Peace

Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, yesterday called for American sacrifice to transform our "age of anxiety" into a militantly peaceful "age of confidence."

Dr. Douglass

Speaking at Columbia Heights Christian Church, 1435 Park rd. nw., he said that mankind is now in the midst of a struggle "to develop a new character of human existence by which earth can be lifted to heaven."

National and international events, he pointed out, show us that "the aspirations of men are momentarily mired . . . the purpose of earth seems alien tothe purpose of God."

Dr. Douglass asked that United States end the "sold war" and "call the forward march of civilization by blowing the bugle for active and militant peace."

'Nucleus of Humanity'

In Arlington, Dr. Charles H. Roberson, head of the Bible Department at Abilene Christian College, told members of the Arlington Church of Christ that the Church was the nuceus of the new humanity.

The church, he said, is never referred to in the Bible as a building, or a party; it is always a corporate personality of those who have become followers of Christ through faith and obedience.

"Our citizenship," he said, is in Heaven. The church is a colony living far from the mother country, but whose manner of life is fashioned after that of the Man of Galilee. The church strives to transform all about it into a likeness of the homeland: set all patterns of life by the life and teachings of the Master Teacher."

Calls Religion Imagination

Back in his pulpit for two weeks after a vacation in Maine, Dr. A. Powell Davies of All Souls' Unitarian Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw., spoke on "Truth Through Imagination." Religion, he said, is imagination, but so is agnosticism, mathematics, and the concept of the universe.

Dr. Davies

He said it was a false belief to contend that only those things within the individual experience are valid. Religion, he declared, is as real as atoms, and can be as dangerous as atoms.

We have used our imagination, he pointed out, to achieve the conquest of the air and the sea. But we have "imagined peace in the world too feebly, and brotherhood we have imagined hardly at all."

One Hope Is Seen

At the Chevy Chase Baptist Church, the Rev. Charles R. Woodson, assistant minister, said "the growing fellowship of the church is the one hope for a united, peaceful, and compassionate world."

In his sermon on the communion and the Lord's Supper, he emphasized "the church and its sacrament of the Lord's Supper recognize no dividing line between nations and races. All who confess the name of Christ are present at his table. We confess the common father, and the brotherhood of men in Christ, and the essential oneness of humanity."

Narrow, Ambitious Hit

"Christian ethics is the only hope of the world at this tragic hour," declared Dr. Robert W. Brooks, pastor of the Lincoln Congregational Temple, 1701 11th st. nw., yesterday.

Rev. Brooks

Economically, he said, we are moving recklessly, oblivious to the needs of the millions in the world who beg for bread, shelter, and a degree of security.

Personal and partisan advantage motivate our political activity, he noted, while the needs of humanity are by-passed, and we focus our eyes on national greatness and profits.

"Only the light of the spirit and teachings of Jesus," Dr. Brooks concluded, "can save our Nation and the rest of the world from complete and ultimate destruction of all that we love and desire."

Unity Through Church

The Rev. F. T. Johnson, minister of the Methodist Church in Mount Vernon, Ind., was speaker at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church yesterday morning. He said we would never be able to solve the dual problems of how to live and how to live well until we learned to live inwardly, and to keep in tune with God. We cannot solve the problems of the world, he declared, through economics, language, or culture.

"If we want to unite the world," the Indiana pastor concluded, "we must do it through the church."

Tribute Paid to Chaplains

At Fort Meyer, Va., Maj. Gen. Luther D. Miller, Army chief of chaplains, paid tribute to the heroic service of the corps on its 172d anniversary.

Gen. Miller

He cited the dramatic incident of the four chaplains who gave their lifejackets to others when the transport S.S. Dorchester was torpedoed in 1943.

"To these men," he declared, "there was but one God—not a Protestant, Roman Catholic, and Jewish God. Peoples of all faiths can be proud of these men of different religious beliefs who died together."

Nicaragua Elects 49 to Pick Chief

Managua, Nicaragua, Aug. 3 (U.P.).—Nicaraguans today elected a 49-man constituent assembly that will meet Aug. 29 to choose a successor to provisional President Lacayo Sacasa and revise the Constitution.

Lacayo Sacasa was installed by a military coup, which ousted legally elected President Leonardo Arguello shortly after his inauguration May 1. The coup was led by former President Gen. Anastasio Somoza, who heads the powerful National Guard.

Latin American republics and the United States have not extended recognition to the Lacayo Sacasa regime.

3 Seek Md. Legion Post

Baltimore, Aug. 3 (AP).—A spirited election contest for commander is expected to enliven the annual convention of the Department of Maryland, American Legion, opening here Wednesday.

Three members already have announced intentions of seeking the post now held by John F. Boschen: Samuel J. Cohen of Hagerstown, vice commander of the western Maryland district; H. Winship Wheatley, jr., of Hyattsville, commander of Snyder-Farmer-Butler Post No. 3, and Harry S. Allen, commander of Laurel Post No. 60.

More than 1200 members of the Legion and its auxiliary are expected for the five-day convention.

Charles County Picnic

Leonardtown, Md., Aug. 3.—The Charles County Farm Bureau will hold its annual picnic at Chapel Point, Md., on August 13, with the public invited to attend. John Gee, teacher at La Plata High School, will be in charge of games.

Feature of the picnic will be selection of the group's entrant in the "Miss Maryland" beauty contest, to be held at the Timonium Fair, in September. Charles County's entrant last year, Miss Elizabeth Wilmer, of Pope's Creek, Md., was runner-up for the beauty title.

National Weather Summary

Copyr., 1947, Edw. L. A. Wagner

TWENTY-FOUR-HOUR FORECAST: The clear, cool weather which Northeasterners have been enjoying for the past several days is about over. Weather experts studied their charts and air flow patterns and advise a warm, moist air flow from the Gulf of Mexico will bring hot sultry weather to the entire country east of the Rockies. (See air mass and air flow arrows.)

Highest temperatures this afternoon will be 90 degrees or higher from the Atlantic to the Great Divide except for the New England States which will record afternoon readings in the 80s. Under the influence of warm southerly winds and sunny skies the mercury will soar above 100 degrees in the Central Plains and the Southwest Desert Region.

Towering thunderheads will build up over the entire U. S. today as the sun lifts warm southerly air off the Gulf of Mexico and the south Pacific. Scattered showers and thunderstorms are expected over the entire Nation except New England, the eastern Plains and California.

Air flow around the high-pressure cell off the Florida coast will cause hot, humid weather from the Rockies to the Atlantic. Weather fans will note the only fronts on the fotocast are in central Canada and off the Delaware coast.

Forecasters say today will be mostly sunny with partly cloudy skies except for an overcast from western New York to Maryland and over western Texas.

Forecast maximum temperatures for this afternoon include Kansas City, 103; St. Louis, Tulsa and Nashville, 100; Atlanta, 97; Fort Worth, 96; Chicago and Bismarck, 95; Cleveland, 94; Buffalo, Pittsburgh and Detroit, 92; New York and Philadelphia, 90; Albany, 89; Milwaukee, 88; Hartford, 87 and Boston, 86.

Cuban Envoy Awarded Papal Decoration

By Marie McNair

THERE'S to be a very special ceremony at the Cuban Embassy on Friday.

That afternoon the Cuban Ambassador, Guillermo Belt, will receive the Grand Cross of the Order of Saint Sylvester from His Holiness the Pope, brought from the Vatican by the Rev. De Caria, secretary of the new Papal Nuncio in Cuba.

The young and good looking Ambassador is in New York now where he's been attending the meetings of the Social and Economic Council of U. N. With him is pretty little Senora de Belt and their five children, the baby having arrived last week. But they'll all be back in Washington on Friday to remain for the week. end.

Elisa de Belt, who looks like a child herself, is having great fun showing her lively offspring the town.

"I have relived my childhood with a vengeance," she writes. "You should have seen me with all five of them climbing to the top of the Statue of Liberty with the thermometer at a cozy 92.

They've been to the Bronx Zoo, the Museum of Natural History, among other places, and have even taken the famous carriage drive through Central Park. And of course, Coney Island was a must. "No, I did NOT ride the roller coaster," said Elisa, "I had to draw the line SOMEWHERE."

MRS. ALBERT J. BOWLEY got off for Europe sooner than she had expected, in fact she had little time to tell her friends goodby. The widow of Lieutenant General Bowley and a sister of Mrs. Alfred I. duPont sailed last Wednesday on board the America for France.

She'll visit in Paris and late this month will go to Poland to be with her nephew, Capt. Freeman Bowman, Assistant Military Attache of our embassy in Warsaw. Mrs. Freeman Bowman, who is pleasantly remembered in Washington, is the former Miss Sally Anderson. Her father is now commandant at Hickam Field, Hawaii.

Before Mrs. Bowley returns to Washington the end of September she will stop in London to be the guest of the Duchess of Northumberland and will renew acquaintance with Sir Paul and Lady Butler, whom she first met in San Francisco a number of years ago.

TOWN TOPICS: Tiny, red-headed Nathaniel Macon Martin, just 6 months, took his christening yesterday with a smile.

Swathed in an heirloom christening gown of yards and yards of sheerest linen and row upon row of real Val lace, little Nat was surrounded by adoring relatives while the Rev. Charles Warner of St. Alban's Church officiated at the ceremony.

His parents, Col. and Mrs. Nathaniel Macon Martin, quite naturally, were there; also Mr. and Mrs. Burks Summers, and Mrs. Frank F. Mathers, the baby's great-grandmother, who brought with her from Philadelphia the christening robe.

Mrs. Stanley Scott, wife of Brig. Gen. Scott, was little Nat's godmother. Godfathers were Col. Robert P. Hansen, USA, who served with Colonel Martin in Iran, and C. F. Widmayer of Lancaster, Pa., a close friend of the late Charles Hubert Martin, Colonel Martin's father.

A card from Mrs. Walter Amesbury, jr., sending greeting from picturesque Montreux, where she is spending a few weeks. She met Drucie Snyder, daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Snyder, in Paris, and also Mrs. J. J. Mack. From Paris Ce-Ceile Amesbury will go to Italy and then Turkey and she'll stop in England before returning home.

Peter Crosby, who is spending the summer at Spring Lake, N. J., caught by the camera as he leaves the Bathing and Tennis Club with Mrs. Peggy Cooper.

Matron Gets Shockingly Rude Brush-Off From Favorite Brother and His Wife When She Goes To Station to See Them Off to New Army Post

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My brother, a veteran, has re-enlisted for two years. He and his wife were leaving for their new post the other day and I went to the station to see them off, with feelings of love and good will toward both.

When I arrived at the station, several of their neighbors and friends were also there, and much to my surprise my sister-in-law said to me, "Why did you come down? You make it very hard for us." I didn't know where to turn and she left me out of the conversation. I had a gift for both, which I gave to my brother.

It drew near time to leave and the group started upstairs to board the train. I was going along and my brother said, "You needn't come up to the train." I was stunned but said, "I would like to see you off." He said, "Oh, be reasonable! Our friends are going out to eat as soon as we leave, and besides, you're not dressed to be in the crowd."

Husband's Angry; She's Heartbroken

I WAS TRYING very hard to bear up, but I was so hurt that I cried and walked away from him. He went on upstairs to his wife and friends. He was my favorite brother, who had never belittled me in any way before. I had always felt I could go to him at any time and even now I can hardly believe he would speak and act as he did at the station.

I am heartbroken over the whole incident and wonder just where I made my error. I didn't intend to intrude on the party and was dressed like the other ladies: in a plain afternoon street dress, hatless, with flowers in my hair. The train was leaving at 7:30 p. m.

My husband is very angry at me for going to see them off, but more angry at my brother and his wife. My sister wants me to write to Tom, asking for an explanation. She says he should apologize for his exceedingly bad manners to me. Should I broach the subject to him, telling him how I feel?

Please help me to see this thing in the right way. I shall be guided by whatever you may suggest to settle my mind and heart, as I have had a crying spell and can't seem to dispel it from my thoughts. L. B.

Man's Henpecked; Sister Is Clinger

DEAR L. B.: Your major error at the station was in sticking around like a sick forlorn kitten after Mrs. Tom had verbally spat in your face. Which suggests that in general you are a pretty limp personality, drearily short on poise and self-esteem and perhaps a neurotic tenacious clinger when your emotions are "fixed."

As for seeing Tom's actions in the right light, it's obvious that he is a henpecked husband; and that the unkind brush-off he gave you was a flustered impromptu echo of his wife's ill-mannered example. Apparently she is a jealous, possessive spouse, with an axe out for any affectional ties that figured significantly in his experience before she got him.

It is safe to assume that he's no less distressed in retrospect than you are, about the slap in the face they dealt you; but also I daresay his wife keeps him so busy dancing to her tune that he hasn't much time or energy to spend in "saving face" with others.

Overly Attached To Her Brother?

DOUBTLESS her vicious reaction to your gladsome approach was intended to block a fond farewell exchange between you and Tom, and turn you away with a stricken sense of how little you belong in his life nowadays. And it may be, of course, that you are pretty cloying and fondly presumptuous in relation to Tom.

Maybe since Tom first went to war or since he got married you've been beaming an excessive amount of woebegone nostalgic sisterly sentiment at him,—as your husband's unsympathetic attitude toward your big humiliation hints. Possibly you do "make things hard" for Tom in this respect,—as suggested by his involuntary exclamation, "Oh, be reasonable!" when you were swallowing pride to tag after him to the train.

When Mrs. Tom bared her fangs, you should have rejoined, "Oh, I'm sorry," turned at once to Tom for a brief handshake and word of goodbye, left the gift with him and swept out. However, you didn't, so forget it. For advice: Stand on your dignity with them hereafter. Don't cry after Tom in letters, asking apology or explanation. Read Joshua Loth Liebman's "Peace of Mind," which offers clues as to cause and cure of sickly emotions. M. H.

Turn In Used Cooking Fats!
asks MARY MARGARET McBRIDE, Famous Radio Commentator

One of the finest jobs ever done by American housewives has been in saving used fats! Since 1942, over 800 million pounds have been salvaged. But, as Secretary of Commerce W. A. Harriman points out, the job still isn't over. "Not only the United States, but the whole world still lacks adequate supplies of fats and oils. And we in America are particularly short of industrial fats." These industrial fats, or their products, are needed to make many things we use every day. The used fats you turn in will help tide us over until supplies are normal.

Thumb Sucking Just a Phase in Tot's Life

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

"Oh," wailed the mother of a 3-month-old baby, "she has begun to suck her thumb. What shall I do?"

"Nothing," I told her. "Nothing at all."

It's hard to convince most mothers that they need not begin to thwart the child's desire to put that thumb in her mouth. They have been subjected to so many scares in the past about misshapen mouths and malocclueded teeth.

Gesell and Ilg in their book, "Infant and Child in the Culture of Today," have this to say, "Thumb sucking functions as a real component of the growth complex. Its harmfulness varies greatly with the type of child and associated behavior.

"The fact that in complicated cases it pursues a characteristic developmental course and undergoes spontaneous extinction suggests that artificial curbs and restraints have doubtful value. There is no conclusive evidence that thumb sucking, if discontinued by the age of 5 or 6 years, has a permanent deforming effect upon denture and occlusion."

Mothers will find that their children tend to thumb-suck at very definite times. Often it prefaces the bottle or nursing and the child will cry, fuss, find its thumb and suck upon it until the welcome food appears.

Sometimes, the baby sucks its thumb vigorously in the early months of its life and then abandons the habit when it nears 3 years of age. Other mothers may note that it seems to be at its worst around 2 years and they begin to feel hopeless about the whole thing.

Since frustration increases the strength of the child's attachment to its thumb, to tie it up or put on bad-tasting medicines, or punish the child, is almost sure to cause a renewed adherence to the habit as soon as these practices are ended, as eventually they must be.

Letting the child suck his thumb without interference, but seeing to it that he is well-fed and has ample opportunity for activity and use of his hands, should insure that the habit will be dropped when the impulse to suck has run its natural course.

Your Questions On Homemaking

The other day in a restaurant, I was served a delicious mustard sauce with ham. It was much sweeter than the usual prepared mustard. I wonder if you know how such a sauce might be made? P. R. R.

Here is a recipe for a fluffy mustard sauce that is delicious with ham, beef, or fish:

2 tablespoons dry mustard
3 eggs, separated
½ cup vinegar
½ cup consomme
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper

Mix sugar, mustard, and beaten egg yolk in top of small double boiler. Add vinegar and consomme, and heat thoroughly. Add seasonings. Fold into stiffly beaten egg whites and continue cooking about 5 minutes.

I have a lounge chair with cushion back and seat filled with 100% kapok. When fluffing these cushions, a lot of fine dust-like particles sift through the chintz upholstery. Is this dust caused from deterioration of fibers in the stuffing? The particles are stifling if inhaled, and I wonder if they are harmful. How can this dust be removed from the upholstery? E. W. S.

The filler you describe sometimes becomes powdered after it has been in use for awhile and sifts through the upholstery. The particles themselves are not harmful. In fact, kapok—pillows are recommended for certain allergy cases. However, breathing any type of dust can be irritating to the respiratory system. A brush and a damp cloth should be effective in removing the dust from the surface of the upholstery. However, it will soon sift through again. Covering the chair with a slip cover made of closely woven fabric would help to solve the problem.

What dressing can be used to preserve leather book bindings? L. P. M.

Pure white petroleum jelly, of the quality used for medicinal purposes, is excellent for preserving leather bindings. Only a thin film should be put on at one time. Repeated applications in small quantities should be made at intervals of several hours until the leather is well oiled. Place the books in a warm (but never hot) place between applications so the grease will be absorbed more rapidly. Be sure not to put on more jelly than the leather can absorb, or the books will feel greasy. Apply with fingers and palm of hand, rubbing in well with firm, rapid strokes. More jelly should be applied to the back and hinges of the bindings, as they rot more rapidly than the sides. The books should be given this treatment every year or so.

Will you please publish a recipe for cooking spareribs, as well as suggestions as to other ways of preparing spareribs? D. H. S.

A recipe for preparing enough barbecued spareribs for six servings follows:

1/3 cup water
3/4 cup vinegar
1/3 cup butter
1/3 cup chili sauce
3 tablespoons horseradish
3 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1/2 teaspoon salt
dash of cayenne pepper

Wipe spareribs and crack bones across the middle. Lay on broiler rack and place under low flame or heating unit in preheated broiler. Broil very slowly about ½ hour, or until brown and crisp, basting occasionally with sauce made by heating together remaining ingredients. Use sauce left from basting for gravy.

Spareribs are also good baked like a pork roast and served with brown gravy made from the drippings in pan. If desired, stuff the rib with onion stuffing. Boiled spareribs and sauerkraut are another tasty dish. To serve six, use four cups sauerkraut to three pounds spareribs, cut in pieces. Cook spareribs in salt water half an hour, then add kraut and boil another half hour uncovered. Drain slightly and serve on hot platter.

I have met my boss' wife several times and she has seemed quite friendly. I'm planning to give a buffet supper next Saturday night and would like to invite them. However, I wonder if it's proper for me to extend the first invitation. They have never invited me to their home or to go out with them. H. J. M.

It would be wiser, I believe, to wait until they extend an invitation to you. The lead in your social relations with your employer's family should come from their side.

Leopard Corduroy a New Fabric for Fall

A leopard can't change his spots, but corduroy, one of cotton's most versatile fall fabrics—does a neat trick that could fool the beasts of the jungle and comes up with a startlingly realistic and beautiful leopard print this season. It has a refreshing novelty and richness of quality that will lend dash and drama to the new fall styles. The leopard pattern of dark brown spots flecked with deep mustard is printed on medium wale corduroy in a warm beige tone that makes a strikingly soft furry background.

Durable corduroy—in this case called Leprocord—makes the new pattern adaptable to a wide range of fashionable sports or outdoor wear, says the Cotton-Textile Institute and National Cotton Council. Fall coats—smoking or lounge jackets, campus coats, sports shirts, and even berets and handbags will easily take to this colorful fabric.

The little chipmunk, not to be outdone by his ferocious jungle friend, also has his place in the new fall fabric line. The chipmunk pattern is printed in beige and brown on medium wale corduroy, which gives it the same softness and realistic appearance as the leopard pattern.

'Stone Flower' Arrives

Fairy Tale Has Social Signif

By Richard L. Coe

REVIEWING "STONE FLOWER," a fairy tale film from foreign parts now at the Hippodrome, has more pitfalls than you might think.

For "Stone Flower" is a Soviet fairy tale and it opens up discussion as to exactly what a child's story should contain. There are, as you know, all sorts of theories among educators that our juvenile literature is largely pernicious bunk.

The Soviet movie makers appear to take this stand. "Stone Flower" has all the attributes you may associate with Grimm and Andersen, but it also has its line of social significance in the selfish, empty power of the very rich over the pitiably poor.

This recurs, to be sure, time and again in the fairy tales we westerners have been brought up on. The wicked queen of "Snow White" somehow embodies the evil the Soviet associates with wealth and you probably can rescue similar characters from childhood's memory.

But the Soviet makes a decided point of it in this essentially simple fairy story. The elegant rich have no use whatever for the poor and their time is spent in working a poor stonecarver to death so as to have a more handsome malachite box than a Parisian marquis.

We're not condemning such an approach to young Soviet minds nor is it anything new. But it is an interesting facet to a film that is otherwise undistinguished.

Danila is the foster child of an aged stonecutter, whose master is always demanding the finest art from him under threat of death. Danila learns the trade well, so well that he is rewarded by the attention of the Lady of Copper Mountain. She lures him away from his fiancee into the marvellous caves of her mountain, showing him such splendid, luminous rock as only an artist would dream of.

And so there he stays, chipping away, carving beautiful stone, but always repelling the amorous advances of the sorceress. On the outside of this magic mountain is Katya, still faithful to her vanished lover, watching over his dying foster parent. As in all good fairy tales and Hollywood movies, Virtue finally is rewarded, with the sorceress confessing she was only testing our hero and bringing Katya to him in the colorful caverns.

The settings in the mountain are charmingly childlike. About all the peasantry there is a sugary regard for the simple peepul, their folk songs and dances, that we found more than a teensy, weensy bit gooey.

The color technique won for the film top honors at the Cannes Film Festival last year, though technically the film is far inferior to the Hollywood standard. The acting by Vladimir Druzhnikov, as Danila; Elena Derevschikova, the Katya; Mikhail Troyanovsky, the old man, and Tamara Makarova, the sorceress, is capably charming. The film was produced by Alexander Ptushko, best known in this country for his puppet film, "The New Gulliver."

NEW PLAY COMING: A pre-New York week for "We Love a Lassie" opens Monday, September 1, at the National . . . This is a romance of the Scottish highlands, written in collaboration by a Kansas City newspaperman who's lived abroad the past 25 years . . . He is Marcel Wallenstein and he met his collaborator, Kathleen Kennedy, in London, where their play caught the attention last month of the wandering Lee Shubert . . . Frye, 901 B st. ne.; Dorothy Kirke, 311 Atlantic st. se.; Mary Ann Moffett, 1105 Woodside Parkway, Silver Spring; Helynn Nixon, 1910 T pl. se.; Margaret June Folson, 1011 17th st. nw.; and Peggy Wilson, 2721 Blaine dr., Chevy Chase.

"OUR WORLD." Tomorrow night's series of documentary films sponsored by The Washington Post and the D. C. Public Library in the Interior Auditorium includes four films, all briefer than usual. "Music in the Wind" pictures the building of organs; "Flat Hatting" is the professional lingo for plane stunting; "Our Heritage" depicts the architecture of India" and "Silent Service" is a color film devoted to our submarine service.

Calm and Quiet Policy Pays Off

Hollywood.—George Stevens is following a "Let's be quiet, let's be calm" policy in directing RKO Radio's "I Remember Mama," the first George Stevens production he has made since returning from extensive war service.

As a result of this mind-over-matter policy, Stevens scored the unusual achievement of filming Irene Dunne, Barbara Bel Geddes and Philip Dorn in five minutes and 30 seconds of uninterrupted dialogue, one of the longest single takes ever filmed.

Part of Stevens' success is due to his abolishment of the nerve-trying loud bell and buzzer signaling the start of a take.

Friends in High Places Aid Pan Am Airways

By Drew Pearson

In an old colonial house at 2017 F st. stands one of the most effective lobbying rendezvous in Washington—the secret residence of Pan American Airways.

You won't find the address listed in the phone book. But if you ring the bell, a dignified butler will open the door, and once inside you will probably find genial Sam Pryor, Republican National Committeeman from Connecticut, and on occasion Juan Trippe himself, president of Pan American Airways.

To this well-appointed colonial residence last winter were invited several members of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. And over the coffee and brandy which followed dinner, Juan Trippe unfolded his ideas on the chosen instrument, in other words, having one company fly the air routes of the world.

Trippe, the brother-in-law of former Secretary of State Stettinius, is a persuave and charming talker. He could almost talk the Russians out of a veto. Two years before, he had staged an all-out campaign to get the "one company" plan OK'd by Congress but failed. Last winter, with the first Republican Congress in 16 years, he was determined to try again.

Pan American Persuasion

Two Congressmen at this dinner were Committee Chairman Charles Wolverton of Camden, N. J., and Evan Howell of Illinois, both Republicans. And so profound was Trippe's impression that about one week later, both Wolverton and Howell introduced identical bills favoring the "one company" plan for overseas airlines.

Simultaneously, two other members of the same committee, Hinshaw of California, Republican, and Harris of Arkansas, Democrat, introduced similar bills. It is not known that they were at the secret Trippe dinner, but it was known that none of the four really drafted the bills they signed. In fact, Hinshaw freely admitted to friends that the bill was "handed" to him, and it was generally understood that the "hander" was Henry Friendly, attorney for Pan American Airways.

Note—It's significant that both Wolverton and Howell, who attended the Trippe lobbying dinner, are among those who have just asked for free air transportation overseas to study the "one company" idea. Last week they were turned down by the Civil Aeronautics Board. Howell, though now appointed a Court of Claims judge, still wants to "study" airline legislation—overseas. Incidentally, Wolverton was so irate when the CAB refused the free junket, that he has written a strong letter to the CAB asking that it reconsider when all its members are in Washington, Jim Landis and Clarence Young, former vice president of Pan American and now a CAB member, were not present when the free-travel request was vetoed.

Best-Friend Brewster

About the time the four Congressmen introduced their Pan American-inspired "one company" bill, a companion bill was introduced in the Senate by Brewster of Maine. Pan American's best friend and long-time Senatorial booster.

The Senator from Maine has never concealed his frank and open championship of Pan American. That friendship is taken for granted around the Senate. Once Brewster even flew in a Pan Am special plane NC4000 to Raleigh, N. C., to try to persuade the late Senator Bailey, then chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, to come out for the "one-company" bill. Bailey refused.

Now spearheading the probe against Howard Hughes' airplane contracts, Brewster has been charged by Hughes with promising to call off the Senate probe if Hughes' Trans World Airline and Pan American could get together.

Astute and able, Brewster is only one part of the ramified network of Pan American friends and helpful promoters. Another working closely with Brewster is John Cooper, former vice president of Pan Am, who very conveniently was appointed consultant to the Library of Congress on aviation matters and then assigned to the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee as aviation adviser.

It was Brewster, a powerful member of the Interstate Commerce Committee, who arranged that the committee should have the "advice" of this former Pan American Airways vice president. Cooper, long a close friend of Juan Trippe, received a $10,000 retainer from Pan Am, even while teaching international aviation law at Princeton.

Incidentally, the mysterious fact that Brewster is on the Interstate Commerce Committee at all, has been the subject of Senate cloakroom gossip; since Senator White, also of Maine, is chairman of the committee, and two Senators from the same State are not supposed to be on the same committee. Brewster, however, somehow managed to make himself an exception to the rule and obtained a seat on this powerful group which passes on air legislation.

Pan Am Wire Pulling

Pan Am has always been opposed to competition. This is its basic creed.

During the war, when American Export Lines built its first overseas plane and got permission to fly to Portugal, the Navy suddenly seized that plane. It happened that the Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air who OK'd the seizure was Artemus Gates, former director of Pan American Airways, while one of the Navy's key air officers then in charge of trans-ocean flying was Com. C. H. Shildauer, for seven years in charge of Pan Am's Pacific operations.

Pan American usually has been able to have one of its ex-officials also appointed to the Civil Aeronautics Board, and in the early days, Grant Mason, a former vice-president, was a member. However, after Mason consistently voted against Pan Am, he mysteriously failed of reappointment. The failure was attributed to the persuasive Juan Trippe.

For some time Pan Am has come in for vigorous criticism from the Civil Aeronautics Board, largely because of the monopoly idea which it so stanchly champions. When Pan Am had a monopoly in Latin America, CAB investigator Sam Gates, reporting on air-mail contracts, wrote:

"The rates of compensation now being received by Pan American Airways are excessive and are neither fair nor reasonable. Much of the operation in Latin America is no more difficult than the conduct of an airline operation across the United States, yet Pan American had made a total profit of 16 million dollars on an investment of only 10 million dollars.

"To put it another way," Gates continued, "the carrier has made profits during this 12-year period equal to the total capital employed, plus an over-all profit of 60 per cent."

This lush profit came about through the monopoly position Pan Am then held in Latin America and which it now wants reinstated. This monopoly originally was granted through the intervention of Walter Brown, Postmaster General under Hoover. Second largest Pan American stockholder is R. K. Mellon, whose uncle was Secretary of the Treasury in the same Cabinet with Postmaster General Brown. Another large stockholder was David K. E. Bruce, then son-in-law of Mellon, and now Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Air under Averell Harriman. Bruce is an able and fair-minded gentleman, but the appointment puts him in the difficult position of a Pan American Airway friend occupying one of the highest spots in Government.

Marshall Leaves Soon for Conference in Brazil

By the United Press

Secretary of State George C. Marshall leaves for Brazil next week during what officials privately admitted last night may be a critical month in rapidly deteriorating international affairs.

He heads the United States delegation to the Inter-American Conference opening in Rio de Janeiro on August 15.

Six weeks hence the United States resumes its running battle with the Soviet Union in the forums of the United Nations Assembly and the Council of Foreign Ministers.

And six months from now, it is optimistically hoped, the Marshall Plan will be in operation.

Marshall's objective is to "hold the line" against Soviet totalitarianism on a dozen fronts so that the initiative will be with the United States when the fall meetings start and until his plan for European rehabilitation can get under way.

But crises are developing rapidly in many areas.

They require Marshall to perform like a circus juggler—keeping many balls in the air at the same time. If some are not to be dropped, Marshall must spend much of his time in Brazil with his eyes and thoughts elsewhere.

Ever since the Moscow Big Four conference failed in April, Marshall's objective has been "firm containment" of the Soviet Union and maintenance of American initiative at vital points of contact with Russia.

The Secretary appears to have succeeded partially to date. But to enter the fall meetings with his best foot forward will require some fancy foot work in the closing weeks of summer in the economic, political and diplomatic fields.

The British economic crisis tops all others in priority at the moment. Marshall's alarmed economic aides are searching—in vain to date—for ways to tide Britain over its present difficulties until the Marshall Plan begins to operate. They are well aware that the bottom will drop out of the plan unless Britain clings to its present precarious position.

The British government has appealed for drastic revision of the basic principles in the $3,750,000,000 American loan agreement.

The proposed changes would exempt the British temporarily from clauses which prevent them from discriminating against American trade and allow them to buy more food from sterling areas. With only one billion dollars of the loan left, the British plan to cut imports from the United States, curtail military commitments abroad and seek for the United States to assume most of the financial burdens in Germany.

Richmond Negro Lawyer Seeks Nomination For Seat in Virginia House of Delegates

Richmond, Va., Aug. 2 (AP).—A Negro attorney, Oliver W. Hill, is among Richmond's field of 18 candidates for nomination to the House of Delegates in Tuesday's Democratic primary. The city has seven seats in the lower legislative branch.

A member of the law firm of Hill, Martin & Robinson, he is a charter member of the Richmond Civic Council, which works to interest Negroes in taking part in the government of the city. Both the Council and the Richmond Democratic League have announced support of his candidacy.

Local election officials generally expect heavy balloting at the polls Tuesday and point to several factors, including last spring's brisk new registrations, particularly among Negro voters.

The local campaign has been lacking in conflict and issues, and the expected issue over the proposed charter for reorganization of Richmond's city government into the unicameral-manager system has not developped. All candidates have said they would follow the wishes of the city's voters as manifested in the November 4 charter referendum.

Fredricksburg, Va., Aug. 3.—One of the closest primary races in a number of years is expected Tuesday when the voters of Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania County go to the polls to nominate a Democratic candidate for the House of Delegates.

The contest between the incumbent, William J. Gibson, seeking his third successive term, and Francis B. Gouldman, is regarded as a toss-up. Both are young local attorneys. Frank J. Hairfield of Spotsylvania is regarded as having only an outside chance of winning.

Close Fight in Warren

Front Royal, Va., Aug. 2.—The results of the coming Democratic primary election for Warren County offices Tuesday are uncertain, and local politicians do not venture predictions on the outcome.

William C. Armstrong, jr., commonwealth's attorney, is not a candidate for election. There are two claimants in the field for the office, William J. Phillips, attorney for the Town of Front Royal, and Robert H. Webb, substitute trial justice of Warren County. Both are veterans of World War II, Phillips having served in the U. S. Navy, and Webb in the Army Air Corps.

Three of the four members of the county board of supervisors have opposition. In Front Royal magisterial district, C. Oma Maddox, chairman of the board, is opposed by E. H. Stokes. In South River district, Tracewell H. Brown, incumbent, is opposed by Raymond Rudacille. There is a three-cornered contest in Fork district: A. J. Dellinger, incumbent, James L. Hunt, a war veteran, and Samuel D. Esteppe.

FOLO VOTE V

3 Seek Sheriff Post

Culpeper, Va., Aug. 2.—With the Democratic primary election so near at hand, the contest of office of sheriff increases in interest and holds the spotlight for politicians all over the county.

In the three-way fight, the candidates are B. Hood Wayland, who is seeking reelection after serving two terms of four years each; H. M. (Billy) Hawkins, who served on the Culpeper Police Department for 20 years and S. Lillard Pulliam, who claims that he has been running for the office for 18 years.

Bristol, Va., Aug. 3 (AP).—Delegates to Democratic and Republican senatorial nominating conventions yesterday pitted Lloyd Robinette, Democratic incumbent, and the Rev. Charles S. Pendleton, sr., 67-year-old Republican who is emerging from a political retirement of nearly 25 years, against each other in the forthcoming 1947 general election contest for Robinette's seat in the Virginia State Senate, representing Lee and Scott Counties.

Senator Robinette, who is completing his fourth term in the upper house, accepted renomination in a short speech to the bi-county Democratic convention at Gate City. The Republican convention was held at Jonesville.

Western Md. Road Plans

Frederick, Md., Aug. 3 (AP).—A program to preserve the national beauty of western Maryland roads will be outlined August 5 at a meeting of the Confederation of Western Maryland Communities, Inc., President James H. Gambrill, jr., said yesterday.

The confederation is conducting a campaign to keep the Frederick-Hagerstown highway free of billboards, roadside stands and unrestricted building which may detract from the road's appearance.

Roses Galore

Seattle (U.P.).—One of the largest climbing roses in the Pacific Northwest, a Cecil Bruner, exploded into thousands of blossoms at the home of Mrs. Xura Case. The giant plant is 25 years old, stands 14 feet tall and extends 45 feet across the front porch of the Case home.

San Francisco Studies Subway

San Francisco (U.P.).—In downtown San Francisco, all streets lead into Market st., which is causing officials to make a world-wide study of subway systems in search of the eventual solution of an increasingly heavy traffic problem.

The public utilites commission announced that its engineers are studying technical details of the London, Paris and Moscow underground transit systems. The information, with studies already made of systems in New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, will be kept on file to enable fast planning should the city decide to build a subway.

Tobacco Sales Outlook Good In Carolinas

Fairmont, N. C., Aug. 3 (AP).—With a good crop ready for market and with prospects bright for good prices, farmers are awaiting eagerly the opening of tobacco markets of the North and South Carolina border belt Thursday.

W. P. Hedrick, tobacco marketing specialist for the North Carolina State Department of Agriculture, said that the Georgia-Florida opening figures on July 24 indicated the possibility that the border belt opening averages might run to $50 a hundred.

The Federal-State Crop Reporting Service says that border belt growers are not expected to produce quite as much tobacco as they did last year.

South Carolina farmers last year harvested 171,825,000 pounds from 145,000 acres and this year they are expected to produce 144 million pounds from 144,000 acres. North Carolina border belt growers last year grew 110,400,000 pounds on 96,000 acres, and this year a harvest of 89,300,000 pounds is expected from 95,000 acres.

Gross sales on the nine North Carolina markets last year were 168,262,565 pounds at an average price of $48.03, while a total of 167,361,625 pounds brought a $50.75 average on the eight North Carolina markets.

Md. 4-H Camp Opens Tomorrow

Approximately 1000 boys and girls from all parts of Maryland are expected to attend the annual 4-H Club week which begins tomorrow at the University of Maryland.

During their August 4-9 encampment at College Park the teen-agers will study home furnishing, foods, clothing, livestock, poultry, conservation and other 4-H subjects.

They will also attend discussions on etiquette for the teen-ager, the home of tomorrow, atomic energy and the youth of the world. Bernard M. Suttler of the FBI will speak on phases of juvenile delinquency, and university experts will talk on various subjects.

New Poacher Risk

Seattle (U.P.).—The air-minded Washington State Game Department rounded up two illegal fishermen at inaccessible Davis Lake without too much trouble. Spotting the men from their plane while on a salt-planting expedition, two game protectors landed at a near-by field and nabbed them with a catch of 27 cutthroats.

A sewing machine is simple

Compared with this Telephone job!

Extending and improving telephone service is a complex and time-consuming job.

Thousands of precision-built parts must be painstakingly adjusted to work with each other. Millions of tiny connections must be soldered by skilled hands. Cables must be laid . . . poles erected . . . wires strung. Sometimes a whole new building must be constructed.

That's why the job can't be done "overnight."

But today, telephone people are working hard to complete our important construction and expansion program—a program which will mean better service for more people than ever before.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company

August 4, 1947

The Illinois Commission has today granted the petition of the Union Stock Yards

TO OPERATE ITS OWN LINE

After ten years of apparently unjustly holding the Stock Yards line from the owners, they will now have an opportunity of making the improvements that are necessary in furnishing the facilities required for Packingtown, as the livestock driven through the streets prevents the Surface Lines from entring the Packingtown district.

The bankruptcy law has permitted the Elevated trustees in bankruptcy to run a solvent property, retaining all its earnings for the benefit of the bankrupt road (Elevated), while the Stock Yards have been obliged to wait while one legal objection after another has been presented to prevent the Union Stock Yards from operating its own property.

The receivership of the Elevated will end September 1st, so unless the Supreme Court overrules the Court of Appeals, then at last the Union Stock Yards will be able to make the improvements which they desire.

In 1934, the Illinois Commerce Commission's examination of the property showed that the net earnings of the property were $143,000 a year and the number of passengers carried then was only 3,000,000. The number of passengers carried, according to the Elevated's own reports, have been:

1938	3,983,047
1939	3,925,386
1940	4,231,736
1941	5,386,641
1942	6,794,449
1943	7,560,722
1944	8,856,481
1945	8,965,083

or an average of 6,000,000 a year for the past ten years.

Therefore, it is clearly evident that there was no question but what this property was earning the small rental of $93,080 a year that the Union Stock Yards accepted in 1932 when the Elevated became financially embarrassed and this small amount of rental was paid for over twenty-five years without any question.

No separate accounts were kept by the Trustee, the result being that the Trustee could delay as long as possible turning the property back to the Stock Yards and retain the earnings that justly belong to the Union Stock Yards under the Court's order of 1941, which was to the effect "that the Elevated should operate the property for the benefit and account of the Junction until it was taken over by the Union Stock Yards."

"RANLEIGH"

Southern Colonial Mansion,
On Approximately 15 Acres
1½ MILES FROM CHAIN BRIDGE, NEAR LANGLEY, VA.

CONVENIENT TO CITY, 15 MINUTES BY CAR.

This home needs only an inspection to prove the desirability, beauty and restfulness of this delightful countryside so near the Nation's Capital; century-old trees, formal garden, fine shrubbery, large boxwood, tennis courts, spring and small stream (enough water to build swimming pool) comprises the grounds, with 517 ft. frontage on hard-surfaced road, but most attractive entrance to property; the mansion, set far back from the road, was built in 1929 on an old homesite, charming in design, outside and inside, spacious and immaculate throughout; the way it has always been kept; now vacant and ready for occupancy.

First floor—Reception hall, 16x17, interesting stairway, drawing room, 21x27, charming Colonial fireplace, beautiful woodwork, cornice and bookshelves, large screened porch overlooking garden; library, 17x17, most inviting; fireplace, a complete bath; dining room, 21x18, fireplace and exquisite mantel, chair rail and woodwork, opening on an arched "breezeway" to a 2-car garage; large butler's pantry, large equipped kitchen, storage cupboard, cocktail pantry.

Second floor—Master bedroom, fireplace, opening on sundeck which overlooks garden; luxurious private bath, dressing room, 3 huge, equipped, efficient closets; 4 other large bedrooms, 2 other baths (all baths have extra linen storage); rear stairway, large, insulated, floored attic; basement, bedroom, ground level, bath, laundry room, furnace room, oil h.-w. h., all pipes insulated, storage room, 2 guest or servant's rooms and bath over garage; there is an old smoke house and 2 barns.

The house is equipped with telephone jacks and servant's bells; convenient public and private schools and marketing; price and terms upon application; shown at anytime by appointment.

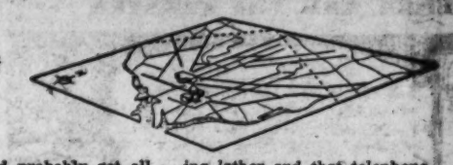
Where Does Monte Get That 'Hippophile' Stuff?



Washington Post classified ads get results — but sometimes they're rather strange results.

Monte Bourjaily, jr., assistant superintendent of the House Radio Gallery, has been trying to find an apartment with a couple of adjoining blades of grass. His 3-year-old son is getting old enough to want a place to play.

So Monte inserted a want ad in his favorite (natch!) paper and worded it something like this:

"Three-year-old who has never had a real home wants house or apartment, about $80, etc., etc. Call ADams 8790."

A gentleman with a foreign accent was the first caller. "What breed is your 3-year-old?" he inquired.

"What breed?" repeated Monte. "He isn't any breed. He's a child."

The foreign accent sighed wearily.

"They told me that in English a 3-year-old was a horse."

Monte hopes that future responses to his ad won't be confined to hippophiles.

SEQUEL

Remember last week's story about Paul V. Thompson, who invented a typewriter washing machine for the government?

Shortly after that item appeared here, Uncle Sam woke up to the fact that he had a rather valuable gadget on his hands, and patent proceedings were instituted.

PERSONAL NOTE

Will the anonymous District Liner who wrote me about the condition of our parks please identify himself?

I'd like to go into the subject with you, but I can't pursue it any further until I know your name.

THOUGHTS WHILE SHAVING

If I hurry I can finish in 15 minutes . . . a quarter of an hour out of my life . . . 15 minutes yesterday, 15 minutes today, 15 minutes tomorrow.

Come to think of it, that's an hour and three-quarters every week . . . times 52 makes 91 hours a year . . . golly, by the time a guy passes the age of 40 he's put in a year's work just scraping his face.

There must be some way to beat this shaving racket . . . I could let it grow, if the summers weren't so hot here . . . besides, a beard would probably get all tangled up in the typewriter keys.

Maybe I ought to shave every other day instead of daily, and cut the wasted time in half . . . But that would mean a 15-minute argument with the Little Woman, so I wouldn't save any time, even if I won—which isn't very likely.

"What's that? . . . Wanted on the phone? . . . grumble grumble there must be an invisible link between my shaving lather and that telephone bell grumble grumble . . . Okay, okay—I'm coming."

REBUTTAL

We recently printed a letter from a reader who suggested temporary suspension of the Army-Navy football game, to help merge the services by ending their rivalries.

Jay Moore, of 3325 Cleveland ave. nw., scoffs at such a notion and snaps, "Oh, boy—is that reader cracked." He adds:

"It's ridiculous to contend that two hours of play on the football field would do any harm to merger plans.

"Besides, if the football games were called off, what would you do about the remainder of the Army-Navy athletic schedule (baseball, basketball, swimming, and all the rest)? And how about the games with other colleges?

"I say let 'em play—and watch Dick Scott and his boys smear those plumbers from the Point this year."

Grin and Bear It

"Other people think I'm a wonderful manager, Fignewton!—I've overheard friends say they don't see how I do it on your salary!"

Leonard Lyons

Hollywood—There is an art to posing for still pictures, an art which most of the film colony has mastered. It involves upstaging or pointing the finger or similar devices to focus attention so that the others in the picture will seem secondary. One of the elementary tricks is to stand at the extreme left when a group picture is taken, because when the photo is published the caption gives first billing to the one at the left. When the studio heads went to Europe at the invitation of the War Department, Jack Warner was advised by one of his aides: "When the producers pose for stills make sure you're at the left." Warner carefully heeded this advice. Darryl Zanuck, in fact, is treasuring a picture which shows all the producers properly posed, except Warner, who is shown running to the left.

Curtiz is the man who made the controversial movie, "Mission to Moscow." When Curtiz was in the Stork Club last he was introduced to Randolph Churchill, who reminded the producer about "Mission to Moscow" and added: "Mr. Curtiz, how dare you tell an actor what to tell my father."

Henry Ginsberg, the production head at Paramount, gave a dinner party for Howard Lindsay, Elliott Nugent, Col. John Coffee and Milton Sperling. Mention was made of the fact that Coffee, under the name of Edward Hope, was the author of "She Loves Me Not." Lindsay had written the dramatization of this story. "I directed the play," said Nugent. "And Paramount bought the movie rights," added Ginsberg. All four turned to the remaining guest, Sperling, and said, "You're the only one in the room who had nothing to do with "She Loves Me Not." Sperling shook his head and said, "You're wrong. I saw it."

Dana Andrews plays the blind pianist in "Memory of Love." Artur Rubinstein was hired to do the actual playing, which was dubbed in. John Cromwell, who directed the picture, was asked who would do the piano fingering to Rubinstein's music. He said that Andrews would do the fingering himself. "Will Andrews be able to do the fingering to Rubinstein's playing?" Cromwell was asked. "Why not," he shrugged. "He's been studying for two weeks."

Frank Sinatra has turned to painting and now has three canvases finished. . . . Buddy Rogers will produce the film biography of Hoagy Carmichael. . . . At the Runyon Fund Night at Earl Carroll's the menus carried the reminder: "You couldn't get fatter or drunker for a better cause."

. . . Sam Wanamaker, who directed and played the lead opposite Ingrid Bergman in "Joan of Lorraine," is making his movie debut in "Sweet Land." Wanamaker startled the moviemakers by breaking precedent and declaring, "Working in a movie is 50 times harder than working in a Broadway play."

Nunnally Johnson and George S. Kaufman have been studying the activities of a movie official who is well known here. They made many inquiries but were unable to discover just what he did or what his duties were. "We spent a number of days trying to find out if this man does anything," Kaufman reported, "and right in the middle of this perplexity he got an assistant."

Rian James, the former New York columnist who came here a dozen years ago to become a screen writer, wrote a screen play which he was unable to sell to any movie studio. Last year James abandoned all hope of selling the script in Hollywood and sold it to a Mexican movie company which produced it with Dolores Del Rio as the star. The picture then was seen by Michael Curtiz, who liked it so much that he recently bought the movie and then signed Rian James to write the English adaptation.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

DO YOU DOUBT YOUR OWN EYES, Y' SLACK MINDED CHILDREN OF IGNORANCE? HERE IS A FORTUNE IN GEMS AND, I TELL YOU, BOR DROPPED THEM IN HIS HASTE TO ESCAPE ME.
GOLLY! THE OLD BANDIT SWALLOWED OUR BAIT, HOOK, LINE AND SINKER. HE'S SO EXCITED HE'S NEVER TAKEN A SECOND LOOK AT THE BAG OF BROKEN GLASS WE FIXED FOR HIM TO FIND ... AND THE POLICE SERGEANT AND HIS MEN ARE DOING A NEAT JOB OF HELPING HIM BLOW HIS TOP!
ENOUGH OF THIS JAW WAGGING! GET THE FAT MAN!
GET THE FAT MAN!
DEATH TO THE FAT MAN!

WAHOO AND STEVE ROPER

GOOT!---YOU ARE OUT OF DANGER, FRAULEIN COOPCAKE!---I HAVE SCORED A BRILLIANT SUCCESS!---PERHAPS YOUR AMERICAN DOCTORS CAN---AS YOU SAY---TAKE IT FROM HERE--!
Weeks of anxious waiting have gone by since Cupcake's operation---and today the Surgeon is about to discharge his patient---!
I GO NOW TO RIDE MY PLANE HOME! AUF WIEDERSEHN!
B-BUT WHEN CAN I JUNK THIS WHEEL CHAIR, DR. MENDER?---THE DAY I WALK IS TO BE MY WEDDING DAY!
CLICK!
ACH! PLEASE, MY CHILD!---I DID NOT PROMISE MIRACLES!---I HAVE GIVEN YOU HEALTH AGAIN---MAYBE SOME DAY YOU WILL WALK---I DO NOT SAY!
B-BUT! OH, SONNY HONEY! ALL THIS FOR NOTHING!

DIXIE DUGAN

YOU SUGGESTED THIS PLACE, NOW YOU DON'T SEEM TO LIKE IT
I'M SORRY IF I GIVE THAT IMPRESSION
YOU APPARENTLY ARE BOTHERED BY THE FACT WE'VE BUMPED INTO KEN BRADFORD --OR, WASN'T IT JUST A COINCIDENCE?
DON'T BE SILLY! OF COURSE IT WAS!
MR. BRADFORD WOULD LIKE TO HAVE YOU AND YOUR LADY FRIEND JOIN HIM AT HIS TABLE
WELL?
I DON'T KNOW WHY NOT
I MET YOU IN DIXIE'S KITCHEN THIS AFTERNOON, DIDN'T I?
DON'T TELL ME YOU WERE COMING OUT TO HELP HER TOO

DONALD DUCK

HAND-BLOCKED WALL PAPER MADE TO ORDER!
DO YOU HAVE A HOBBY WE COULD USE..FLYING, FISHING, YACHTING?
NOPE!
NOPE!
PERHAPS YOU GROW ROSES.. RAISE DOGS?
NOPE!
LOOK, ISN'T THERE ANYTHING IN PARTICULAR YOU LIKE?

NOW TO MEET MISS CHERRY DAVIS AND FIND OUT JUST HOW TOUGH THE COMPETITION IS!
MERIDY! WHAT..?
HELLO... HIGH POCKETS
MERIDY, IT'S GREAT TO SEE YOU...BUT WHAT GOES?
OH, I JUST STROLLED OUT FOR A BREATH OF FRESH AIR.. WHERE'S YOUR LITTLE BUNDLE OF LOVE?
LOOK OUT THERE ON THAT FOUR LEGGED TORNADO.
I MUST ADMIT IT'S AN EXCELLENT PERFORMANCE!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

GLUB...
A STEEL GRATING!
THE SUCTION'S HOLDING US FAST... CAN'T MOVE... WE'LL DROWN!

Happy Childhood

I wish the children of the world . . . Could spend their early years . . . In laughter and in merriment . . . With never any tears . . . Because a happy childhood is . . . The only perfect start . . . Along the path to gentleness . . . And goodness of the heart . . . A happy childhood surely lays . . . The cornerstone of love . . . On which to build the monuments . . . That touch the stars above . . . The monuments of faith and hope . . . And charity to all . . . Where skies are blue and dreams come true . . . However great or small . . . The little boy and girl deserve . . . The best that we can give . . . So let us make them happy in . . . The early years they live.

79 "Portraits" Poems

A GREAT STORE IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL

The Honorable Millard E. Tydings has been in the United States Senate since 1926 . . . is a graduate in mechanical engineering and an attorney at law . . . rose to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel in World War I.

THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON WHOSE HOMES ARE IN

MARYLAND . . . the free state

MARYLAND . . . Colonized in 1634 under an English charter granted to Lord Baltimore . . . whose namesake, the City of Baltimore, is now the third busiest seaport in the Nation . . . with huge seagoing ships coming far up the Chesapeake Bay with cargoes from all parts of the world.

MARYLAND . . . Site of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis . . . where the Navy's battleships lie at anchor in the harbor of this peaceful little city of lovely old colonial homes and tree-lined streets . . . Annapolis, built in 1772, is one of the two state capitals in the country to antedate the Revolution.

MARYLAND . . . With the entire Eastern Shore an intensively cultivated garden plot . . . the State is a leader in vegetable canning—in some years producing one out of every three cans of tomatoes used in the United States . . . a large producer of strawberries . . . and one of the largest chicken "ranches" in the East. Maryland is fifteenth in U. S. manufacturing . . . produces planes, steel, clothing, chemicals . . . packs meat . . . and mills flour. Tobacco has been a principal crop since Colonial days . . . at one time so important it was used as currency for the entire province.

MARYLAND . . . Boasts the "biggest fishing hole in the world"—the Chesapeake Bay—with more fish per square mile than any body of water in America. The fighting white marlin, coveted by deep sea fishermen, are caught in great numbers off Ocean City.

MARYLAND . . . Breeder of fine horses . . . with horse racing; cross-country racing—each year the cross-country racing season is climaxed by the presentation of the highly prized Maryland Hunt Cup; harness racing; horse shows, and fox hunting . . . the annual running of the Preakness at Pimlico is one of the year's top events for three-year-olds.

MARYLAND . . . Leader in medical research . . . with the hospital at Johns Hopkins University one of the outstanding medical institutions of the world.

MARYLAND . . . Where "The Star Spangled Banner" still waves over old Fort McHenry in Baltimore where Francis Scott Key wrote our national anthem during the bombardment of 1813 . . . other great national shrines and museums in Maryland include Antietam Battlefield, near Hagerstown, scene of one of the bloodiest encounters of the Civil War . . . Harpers Ferry, scene of John Brown's raid . . . the first monument ever erected in honor of George Washington, a cairn of rough stones on South Mountain . . . and, at Frederick, the home of Barbara Frietchie, immortalized by Whittier's famous poem.

MARYLAND . . . Where, at St. Marys, for one of the first times in the world, complete freedom of religion was proclaimed.

We Marylanders, close neighbors to the District of Columbia, hail from a State compact in size but great in productivity . . . the past glories of Maryland are surpassed only by the present achievements of our people in their many fields of endeavor. Annapolis, our State capital, where the United States Congress held many of its early sessions, is today one of the finest examples of colonial cities in America . . . and is the home of the United States Naval Academy, from which each spring, in colorful ceremonies, first-class midshipmen are graduated as officers in the United States Navy. We are proud, too, of the role Maryland has played in the country's industrial and economic progress . . . we count livestock and dairy cattle, tobacco and truck crops as our most lucrative agricultural products . . . Baltimore, seventh largest city in the Nation and one of the greatest American seaports, is a trading and manufacturing center for the entire South . . . and Frederick, Cumberland and Hagerstown high up in the mountains are prominent in diversified industrial activities. We consider as our greatest and most universally beneficial accomplishments those taking place at Johns Hopkins, renowned throughout the world in medical research. We invite our neighbors from Washington and the rest of the country to visit and enjoy our cities and our scenic beauty . . . Maryland is unique geographically, with the Chesapeake Bay extending upward through the heart of the State, almost cutting it in two . . . and within its small area has more river frontage than any other State. From these rivers and from the Bay and the Atlantic Ocean, sportsmen, as well as commercial fishermen, each year make tremendous catches of fish and seafood. The State of Maryland is grateful to The Hecht Company for giving us this opportunity to make other Americans better acquainted with Maryland . . . and to say that we are proud of the part our State has had in setting up the National Government . . . under a Constitution preserving to each individual the inalienable blessings of freedom. Let us rededicate ourselves to the principles and tenets of our country . . . to preserve the free institutions of our land, confident in the belief that by so doing we will make the next 150 years of our history even more remarkable than the 150 years that are behind us.

Millard E. Tydings

Senator from the State of Maryland
